Wurtele Elected Reeve By Voters of Esquimalt

New Candidate Leads In Close Council Race

Esquimalt's reeve-elect by a healthy margin is ex-Navy man, ex-councillor Commander A. C. Wurtele, who thinks that planned progress is the answer to the municipality's many problems.

Defeated by the balding, 56-year-old commander was present Reeve A. I. Thomas who has been Esquimalt's No. 1 man since he was elected in June, 1947.

From the time of the returns half an hour after the two polls closed at 8 p.m. last night, there was little doubt of the outcome. The reeve-elect led all the way.

NEW RECORD

Final total of votes established a new record of more than 1,300 votes cast. In June, 1947, when Reeve Thomas defeated J. L. A. Christensen, the vote was just over 1,100.

Flow of voters to the polling stations—Municipal Hall and 855 Craigflower Road—was slow up to 10 a.m. said returning officer, James Elrick, but from then on it picked up and stayed steady until the polls closed.

Topping the polls in the close six-way race for councillor was new candidate G. F. Argyle who led the pack from the start. Close behind were veteran councillors William Dallaway and G. R. Guillemaud.

YOUTHFUL VICTOR

New police commissioner is youthful business man Robert L. Fletcher who won over his sole opponent Michael F. Francis by 161 votes.

Walter Holder won the by-election for one year councillor, defeating F. H. Higgins by a margin of more than 100.

The reeve-elect, after his victory was certain, said "we have a public works program which we will try to put into effect in the new year.

"The municipality of Esquimalt is authorized by the deputy minister of municipalities to borrow $350,000. It is not definite that we could afford that much, but whatever we decide, I want Esquimalt ratepayers to know that we will first get the approval of the department of municipalities.

In paying tribute to his opponent, Cmdr. Wurtele said that no one could have gone through a more pleasant and friendly campaign and that he wanted to thank Reeve Thomas for making it that way.

"I would also like to thank the many people who voted for me and reassure them I will do my very best as their new reeve when I take over in January."

Reeve Thomas said he didn't know whether he would run for office again. "It's hard to say. I'm going to have a rest first. He said he felt a "good man" won.

"I also feel that I have done my duty towards the municipality and I go down feeling I have made my contribution to the public of Esquimalt.

"I have no regrets and I wish to thank all those who have supported me and wish Cmdr. Wurtele every success."

Fierce Blizzard, Cold Snap Hit Eastern Canada, U.S.

By The Canadian Press

A raging blizzard struck Eastern Canada and about half the United States Saturday.

At least three deaths in Canada, two in Ontario and one in Quebec, were blamed on the storm while at least 86 dead were counted in 28 states.

Montreal was hardest hit. Police reported 107 accidents, most of them minor.

A three-hour fire gutted a Canada Steamships Lines shed on the Montreal waterfront during the height of the blizzard. One fireman was slightly injured in the blaze which was punctuated by several explosions. The 250-foot shed was a total loss but there was no immediate estimate of the damage.

The snow piled high in city streets, snarling traffic or bringing it to a standstill.

Railway officials reported trouble with snow drifting over switches. Trains from Winnipeg, New York, Halifax and Cochrane, Ont., were running three hours late.

A baby was born just outside a Montreal hospital in a car while the blizzard howled.

Mr. and Mrs. George Watson set out by taxi at 6 a.m. for Queen Elizabeth Hospital but two hours later they were still a dozen blocks from the hospital with a flat tire.

A passing motorist picked them up and rushed them to the hospital. He dashed in and came out with a doctor and the delivery was made in the car.

A few hours later, both Mrs. Watson and the baby were doing fine. Her husband said he was too shaky to talk about it.

The massive frigid blast swept down from the Rocky Mountains, clutching nearly one-half of the U.S. in its paralyzing grip.

From Montana southward to New Mexico and up to the North Atlantic region the biting, windborne cold left misery and inconvenience to millions.

The cold followed the worst snow storm of the young winter season into the great plains states, the middle west and Great Lakes regions, and the lower North Atlantic states.

Sub-zero temperatures were general in the central portion of the U.S. In the south, the mercury dropped below freezing at many points.

There would be little relief from the bitter cold for at least 24 hours in some sections. Sub-zero readings were in prospect from Montana to Northern New York.

Coalition Attacked By Young Liberals

Break-up of the Coalition government was urged last night by 70 Young Liberals after a stormy three-and-half-hour meeting in Vancouver.

Only item on the agenda was a discussion of the state of Liberalism in B.C. The meeting was called as a result of urging by some delegates at the recent national convention to oust Premier Johnson.

Although the Young Liberal Association re-affirmed loyalty to the Liberal party, they urged strong measures against the present system of provincial government.

The resolution passed last night was as follows:

"Respectfully but urgently request the president of the B.C. Young Liberals to request the B.C. Liberal Association to call a provincial convention not later than June 1, 1952.

"That the Liberal convention state emphatically that they will go to the province at the next election as a Liberal party only.

"Proclaim and re-affirm the historic principles of dynamic Liberalism, and draft a statement of Liberal policy with respect to the problems awaiting solution in the province of British Columbia."

An attempt to bar the press from the meeting failed. President James J. Proudfoot, of Victoria, maintained order throughout the meeting, although at times it became almost violent.

Voters Return A. E. Beasley

DUNCAN, Dec. 15.—Reeve A. E. Beasley was re-elected by a narrow margin to head North Cowichan municipal council.

Reeve Beasley polled 746 votes to defeat George W. Whittaker, with 731, and George Evans, with 190.

Major-Gen. C. A. P. Murison headed the polls to be elected councillor with W. W. Seymour who polled 760 votes. George Pinson, with 643 votes, was well ahead of ousted councillors W. Spencer and Henry Murphy who trailed with 489 and 293 votes respectively.

Session May End Thursday

By TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA, Dec. 15.—The consensus of opinion among government and opposition parties is that parliament will rise about Thursday to let all senators and members get home for a few days before Christmas.

Of four pieces of proposed legislation still on the Commons order paper, the most contentious is the measure to amend the Combines Investigation Act to prevent the fixing of prices at the retail level. This bill is to come up on Monday.

A less contentious bill, but one which life insurance companies are strenuously opposing, is the one to increase the maximum amount of government annuities an individual may purchase from $1,200 to $2,400. It may stand to next session if time is short.

Bills to provide for the establishment of an agricultural products board and to amend the Public Works Act, which were under debate today, also remain to be dealt with.

Soldiers Aid Buddies

A group of Gordon Head soldiers yesterday showed in no uncertain terms just how much they thought of their buddies in Korea.

Battery Sgt.-Major K. E. Buxton marched proudly into The Colonist newsroom, came to a quick halt in front of the city editor and turned over $103 which had been collected on the morning parade from members of the 119th A.A. Battery, R.C.A.

Added to that yesterday was a $5 cheque from the Women's Auxiliary to the Port Alberni Canadian Legion Branch and a $10 cheque from a city couple, and a further $13 brought to The Colonist office. That brought the fund's grand total to $1,807.41.

Reds May Hold 4,000 Allies

PANMUNJOM, Korea, Dec. 15 (AP).—Of more than 11,000 Americans missing in action in Korea, less than 4,000 can be expected to come down the road to this truce camp if the war ends.

This appraisal is based on information from an enemy source. There is good reason to believe it is true.

Refusal of the Communists to list the prisoners they hold has been hindering armistice talks.

Thus far, no Allied spokesman has said officially how many prisoners the United Nations command believes the Communists are holding.

One Allied report recently estimated that up to 8,000 U.N. soldiers have died of wounds or atrocities. This would support the general figure of something under 4,000 being still alive.

Child Suffers Severe Burns

VANCOUVER, Dec. 15.—Gordon Robinson, nine months old, 4899 Quebec Street, Vancouver, is in very critical condition in Vancouver General Hospital after suffering severe burns when his crib caught fire. The fire was caused by an electric hot plate placed under his crib.

Recount Of Votes Ordered

Yesterday's voting in the Central Saanich election was so close that a recount, for the seats of councillors and school board trustees, has been ordered.

In the contest for two-year council terms, Harold Andrew and H. Rupert Brown were elected, with Andrew leading by four votes.

Edward Logan brought up third spot only 14 votes short of race leader Andrew.

For school board, Robert C. Derrinberg led the way by a margin of 106 votes, while Reeve Sydney Pickles placed second with a lead of only three votes over third candidate, Hugh J. MacDonald.

The referendum, to decide whether or not Central Saanich would continue to pay approximately $2 a person for the use of the Victoria Public Library, was defeated by a margin of 70 votes.

Sqdn. Ldr. E. J. McLoughlin was put back into office as police commissioner for a two-year term with a clear majority of 49 votes, while George D. Moody was elected to the one-year term on the police commission, by defeating William P. Turner by a tally of 105.

Of the 11 candidates seeking the six offices, only two were present at the Central Saanich Municipal Hall during the counting of the ballots.

Reeve Sydney Pickles expressed his pleasure at the large turnout to the polls, and said he was both pleased and surprised at the close vote.

"I don't think the candidates who were defeated will feel too badly. It was very close for all concerned," he said.

School trustee-elect Derrinberg said:

"I am very pleased, but I think there should be a recount. I'd rather not say too much about it right now, if you don't mind."

They Know Victory's Taste

Esquimalt's reeve-elect, 56-year-old Commander A. C. Wurtele, and municipality's first reeve, 80-year-old John R. Saunders both know that wonderful feeling of being chosen top man by the people. Although it is 38 years since Mr. Saunders won his laurels, he says he still remembers clearly night he defeated ex-Colonist editor Charles Lugrin for office. Cmdr. Wurtele led all the way as ballots were counted.—(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Wootten, Passmore, Bate New Saanich Councillors

Newcomer Roy Wootten headed the council poll in Saanich municipal election yesterday.

He polled 2,400 votes, followed closely by L. H. Passmore with 2,312 votes and H. K. Bate with 2,189 votes.

Each was elected for a two-year term.

G. Stanley Eden was elected to a one-year term, polling 1,960 votes. He narrowly defeated Henry Robinson, who polled 1,920 votes.

Mr. Eden also was elected to a second position, winning over Walter Calwell by 1,940 to 1,612 votes for a two-year police commission post.

SIDEWALKS PASS

Voters approved allocation of one mill annually for four years to construction of sidewalks at municipal schools. The vote was 1,805 for and 1,742 against.

A referendum to allocate a half-mill for playgrounds maintenance was defeated 1,909 to 1,632.

Reeve Joseph Casey, who attended the full results as they were announced in the municipal hall, said he was satisfied with the election. His main interest is that the council work for Saanich, he said.

Returning officer John Tribe announced that a recount of councillors' votes would be held next week, but added that it was not expected any upset would be found.

SMALL VOTE

He estimated that only 25 per cent of the 14,692 eligible voters cast ballots.

Roy Wootten who heard the election results at his home, arrived at the municipal hall as the last count was posted, boosting his lead. He expressed his appreciation for the confidence voters gave him.

"If honesty and sincerity of purpose are your desire, I can assure you that your confidence has not been misplaced," Mr. Wootten stated.

He also thanked persons who worked for his success and those who used their franchise regardless of for whom their vote was cast.

Mr. Passmore, first elected in 1936, stated: "I will try to do my best to serve the best interests of Saanich."

He expressed thanks for those who supported him and also for other voters for their "public spirit" in voting.

H. K. Bate, re-elected to a second term, congratulated other successful candidates and noted, "I will devote my energies to the municipality's service."

G. Stanley Eden, re-elected police commissioner and elected to a council post, said he felt it was a little unusual to be elected to two offices and that he "would like to see if any benefit could be derived from the combined nature." Mr. Eden thanked all voters, also.

The 1951 council will hold its final meeting Thursday when Clrs. George Austin and W. C. Kersey will officially retire. New councillors will be sworn in at the first 1952 meeting, Jan. 7.

Keen disappointment was expressed by Clr. Mrs. Grace Shaw over defeat of the playgrounds referendum. She stated the referendum's failure would prevent any program initiation until estimates were passed.

Mrs. Shaw said she would attempt to have sufficient funds for grounds maintenance passed in estimates about May.

Reeve Casey said it would be up to the council to begin any work under the sidewalks referendum which passed.

Chad Smith, who polled 918 votes, thanked his supporters and let it be known he would "be back again next year."

Expressions of thanks and congratulations to elected candidates came also from Henry Robinson, D. S. Peirce and W. Calwell.

Three U.N. Suggestions Rejected By Communist Truce Delegates

MUNSAN, Korea, Dec. 16 (Sunday) (AP).—Communist truce negotiators today rejected three Allied attempts to unsnarl the Korean armistice talks.

Tempers grew so short that at one time the Allies asked the Reds if they really wanted to negotiate. But the two subcommittees dealing with truce supervision and exchange of prisoners agreed to meet tomorrow.

At the latter session, the Allies said they would withdraw their demand for an immediate inspection of Red war prisoners camps by international Red Cross observers. They insisted, however, that the Reds hand over their list of Allied prisoners.

The Reds said no.

The Communists insisted that detailed information was not necessary. They want an all-for-all exchange of prisoners as soon as the armistice is signed.

Brig.-Gen. William P. Nuckols, official U.N. Command spokesman, said the Allied withdrawal of its demand for prison camp inspection did not mean the Allies had forgotten the matter.

He said such inspection was "important and desirable." But, he added, the Allies would not insist on it as a prerequisite to continuing the prisoner exchange talks.

Both subcommittees will meet again Monday at 11 a.m.

The Reds at the truce supervision negotiations refused to make any concessions in return for Allied withdrawal from islands they occupy off the North Korean coast.

The Communists also rejected an Allied proposal for clarifying a proposed ban on the reinforcement of military forces during a truce.

Mayor George Praised By Reeve-Elect Wurtele

Mayor Percy George seemed to be the forgotten man in the recent Greater Victoria elections, according to reeve-elect A. C. Wurtele of Esquimalt.

Said he just after his victory over Reeve A. I. Thomas was made certain last night: "It does appear that Mayor George has [illegible] people of Esquimalt will not forget that he was a great booster for Esquimalt and I know they are sorry he has retired.

Aged and infirm voters at Esquimalt yesterday were pleased to find that their handicaps had been provided for.

Because the polling station in the municipal hall was on the second floor, a special ballot box was set up on the ground floor for those unable to climb stairs. Presiding over it was genial H. E. Brown who said that more than 25 people took advantage of the unique service.

As early as 8:30 p.m. unsuccessful candidate for one-year term as councillor, F. H. Higgins, more or less conceded to his opponent Walter Holder.

From the start, Holder was 25 [illegible] municipal hall stairs right at the tensest moment of the ballot counting and Councillor John Carey who was nearest the door rushed out to see what it was all about.

"Is this the police station?" asked an out-of-breath young man. He was assured it was not.

Councillor Carey also figured in another light moment of the municipality election night.

An obvious neophyte Esquimalt resident asked the councillor what was he going to do when his term ended at the end of this month. (Councillor Carey still has one year to go of his two-year term.)

"What do you mean when I'm through" at the end of this month?" exclaimed the councillor. "They've still got to put me through for another year."

Catholics Form Body To Dispense Charity

ROME, Dec. 15 (AP)—An International Conference of Catholic Charities was formed here yesterday by representatives of 12 countries in North America and western Europe. Purpose of the organization will be to coordinate Roman Catholic charitable activities on an international scale. Headquarters will be in Rome.

Haigh Satisfied With Results

Harry Haigh, defeated Victoria mayoralty candidate, expressed satisfaction with the results of Thursday's election of Claude L. Harrison as mayor-elect last night.

"I am well satisfied with the results of the polls," he said.

"Mr. Harrison is not a friend of mine, never was, and never will be. You have chosen Mr. Harrison for your mayor, and I am sure he can do this job with your constant interest and determination behind him," he said in a statement to citizens.

"I know in my own mind that I could have made a better effort of running your city's affairs than the other two defeated candidates.

AWAKENED INTEREST

"I have succeeded in interesting you in the way your city's finances are handled and the way your city's budget is made to balance. I made a statement at the public meeting sponsored by the city and attended by all ex-aldermen seeking re-election for aldermen and mayor, to the effect that they did not understand their budget, and I challenged them to explain to the public a small section that I had brought to the taxpayers' attention, it being to their interest.

"They did not accept this challenge.

"This budget must be made very clear. This is necessary both to the aldermen and the taxpayer. A properly broken down budget would not then take an alderman one complete year to understand. Your city's finances will be better handled as a result, and the taxpayers more satisfied.

"I thank the public for their democratic spirit shown to me on my first appearance in public affairs."

Last Two Polls Win for Eden In Close Fight

Number 13 proved lucky for councillor-elect G. Stanley Eden in Saanich last night.

It was the count from Cloverdale School, the 13th and final polling station, which assured his election over Henry G. Robinson.

Mr. Eden and Mr. Robinson had polled 1,119 and 1,118 votes, respectively, as the ninth polling station count was received. Count of the 10th report showed Mr. Eden ahead by 18 votes.

The 11th report from Cedar Hill, boosted Mr. Robinson ahead by one vote, but the lead changed on the 12th report, placing Mr. Eden ahead by 16 votes with 1,625.

The final and 13th report saw Mr. Eden elected by 40 votes.

Voters Protest In Salmon Arm

SALMON ARM, B.C., Dec. 15 (CP)—Mrs. R. L. Carter, vice-chairman of the Salmon Arm municipal school board, was snowed under in today's civic elections. Councillor G. A. Reynolds was also a victim of the protest vote against school board policies.

British Men Go Wild At Sale of Stockings

WOLVERHAMPTON, England, Dec. 15 (AP)—Police were called Friday to repel an invasion of a local store which had advertised a sale of 5,000 pairs of scarce nylons to "men only" as a Christmas gesture. Some 15,000 surged into the store when it opened, pushed back police, shoved past fainting shop girls and vaulted counters to get at the stockings.

Victoria Man Offers Heart

By BRIAN LOUGHNAN

In a lonely room in downtown Victoria a short, grey-haired grandfather is waiting to hear from a professor in Holland who is going to surgically remove his heart.

In an exclusive interview with The Daily Colonist last night he revealed, in quiet, matter-of-fact words, that he has volunteered and been accepted for an operation to replace his heart with a mechanical pump.

He has signed a contract absolving Professor Jan Jongbloed of Utrecht, Holland, from any responsibility resulting from the operation.

According to the contract he will remain in Holland for two years under observation, if the operation is successful.

IDENTITY SECRET

For two reasons he must keep his identity secret until after the operation.

First, Professor Jongbloed has asked him to withhold his name, to avoid possible public outcry against the operation.

And, although he is a widower, if his family hears of his plan, "they'll do everything they can to stop me."

A story in city newspapers about Professor Jongbloed's heart experiments on animals prompted him to write, offering himself as the first human to undergo the experiment.

Correspondence with the professor resulted in a contract, which he signed and returned yesterday.

Last night he pleaded, "Please don't think I'm crazy, nor that I'm only interested in the idea financially. I'm doing it partly on account of my son, partly to give others hope."

SON DIED

His son died in the war, on a ship at sea, after being refused for military service because of a weak heart.

According to the contract, all expenses for the two-year period will be paid for him. He has asked Professor Jongbloed to provide him with additional expenses or hospitalization if he becomes a permanent invalid as a result of the operation.

Part of the contract consists of an exhaustive medical history, demanding birth certificate, his weight, height, profession, sobriety, disposition and police record if any.

"The death rate in Canada is second only to cancer," he said last night. "A successful mechanical heart will be a good service to humanity."

He is not worried about the outcome of the operation. "There won't be much shock involved in such an operation," he said. "There is no reason why I shouldn't survive it."

He has applied for a passport. His affairs are in order. Only one requirement is unfilled—an examination by a heart specialist.

"I'm not worried," he said. "I have a strong heart."

Glasgow Lord Provost Embarks from Halifax

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Dec. 15 (CP)—Sir Victor Warren, Lord Provost of Glasgow, and Lady Warren received greetings from the city of Saint John and the St. Andrew's Society today before sailing for home on the liner Empress of Canada. The Warrens have been on an extended tour of Canada.

Japanese Probing "Pirating" of Designs

TOKYO, Dec. 15 (15)—Official sources report the Japanese government is investigating British charges of "pirating" chinaware designs. The government is said to have sent two reports to the Japanese Overseas Agency in London, saying legal measures were being taken.

Pigeon Chooses Haven

WEEHAWKEN, N.J., Dec. 15 (AP)—A banded pigeon, apparently lost in the snowstorm, picked a good refuge yesterday. He made an emergency landing and stopover on a window sill at the home of Mrs. Bertha Miller, a member of the New Jersey Humane Society.

Volcanic Wasteland in Philippines

A lone native and tall straight palms that stand like ghosts amid the fiery eruption from Mount Hibok-Hibok, in background, are the only signs of life as the volcano belches flames and smoke for the eighth consecutive day. Twenty thousand refugees fled this fiery scene in Camiguin Island, Southern Philippines, using every means available from Japanese freighter to an outrigger canoe to cross the strait to Mindanao Island. The eruptions have killed 266 people and another 500 are estimated buried under lava and ashes.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Bookie Trial Goes To Higher Court

VANCOUVER, Dec. 15 (CP).—The first step in Vancouver's giant cleanup of bookmakers was made today when Magistrate W. W. B. McInnes committed 26 men and a lone woman to higher court on charges of conspiring to keep betting houses.

At the same time the magistrate found that the Crown has not presented sufficient evidence to commit six other accused.

The 27 persons will be formally committed Tuesday.

The 14-day preliminary hearing was the longest known in Vancouver's history. It was highlighted by Prosecutor Gordon Scott's attempt to prove the 34 persons had conspired together and with more than 200 others to operate betting houses and the seven defense counsel contested that one word, "conspiracy."

"This is a conspiracy of a group of racketeers banded together to grow fat on the ever susceptible public," Mr. Scott said.

The prosecution dropped its case against one of the defendants earlier in the hearing.

Virginia Still Believes In Santa 54 Years Later

NEW YORK, Dec. 15 (AP).—Virgina still believes in Santa Claus.

She does, because the little children in her school have no doubt he exists.

As Virginia O'Hanlon, aged eight in 1897, she wanted to know for sure. She wrote a letter to The New York Sun, asking an opinion.

The result was one of the most famous newspaper editorials ever written.

"Yes, Virgina, there is a Santa Claus," it said. "He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist . . ."

Now, as Mrs. Edward Douglas, she is principal of Public School No. 31, in Lower Manhattan.

Do the children of today believe in Santa the way they did in years past?

"The little ones do," she said. "And the older ones have just as much Christmas spirit as they ever did."

Mrs. Douglas finds that in a world of tension and uncertainty today's children have a very marked willingaess to share.

"The children really seem more interested in giving than receiving," she said. "You seldom hear 'what am I going to get?'"

In active good health, Mrs. Douglas now is 62.

She still remembers her own excitement when The Sun came out with its editorial stating unequivocally that Santa Claus existed.

She had asked in her letter: "Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?"

"He lives, and he lives forever," the editorial said. "A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten-thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

"When I read it as a girl," she said, "it spoke of a world I knew. Now, when you read it with its reference to tens of thousands of years from now, you realize the certainty of the world 50 years ago compared with the uncertainty now.

"Let us hope at this Christmas season that the dangers will disappear and that the hearts of children can be glad for tens of thousands of years."

Oddities

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Dec. 15 (INS).—Frank Phelps, Jr., of Baldwinsville, N.Y., won exemption from jury duty with the most unusual reason in years: His house was on fire.

The Phelps home was destroyed and he and his wife and their four children lost all their clothing and furniture.

Fellow jury-panel members took up a collection and gave Phelps $52.50.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 15 (INS).—A bandit who attempted to hold up Elmer Lawson's confectionery in St. Louis wound up 80 cents to the bad.

He was doing fine at first. He ordered a package of cigarettes, and gave Lawson a dollar to pay for them.

As Lawson put the 80 cents change on the counter, the bandit drew a gun.

But Lawson noticed it was only a toy. He seized a butcher knife.

The bandit grabbed his cigarettes and ran, leaving his change.

Churchill Seeks Veto Over A-Bombing Plans

EUROPE TODAY

By KINGSBURY SMITH

PARIS, Dec. 15 (INS).—Reports are current in French diplomatic circles in Paris that British Prime Minister Winston Churchill will seek from President Truman a virtual veto power for Britain over use of the atom bomb by American strategic air force planes based in England.

These reports are based on diplomatic advices received from London.

According to the latter, the question of the circumstances under which the United States would be entitled to launch atomic air attacks against Russia from Britain will be one of the major issues which Churchill will discuss during his forthcoming trip to Washington.

The diplomatic advices have led French officials in Paris to believe that Churchill intends to use this issue as a trump bargaining card in his talks with President Truman.

This is thought to be the significance behind Churchill's recent references in the British House of Commons to the American "atom bomb base" in Britain.

Churchill said the use of this base in an emergency "would be a matter of joint decision between His Majesty's Government and the United States Government in the light of the circumstances prevailing at the time."

In view of what French officials know about the present understanding between the United States and Britain on use of the atom bomb, this statement by Churchill is believed to represent the agreement he hopes to secure in Washington rather than the existing accord.

The latter is understood by French officials to provide that the United States would give the British government advance notice when America decided to use the atom bomb against an aggressor.

These assurances were given to Clement Attlee when he was head of the British socialist government.

They were given at a time when Britain feared the United States might decide to use the atom bomb in Korea or against Communist China. Attlee went to Washington to dissuade President Truman from taking any such action. He returned to London with the promise that Britain would be told before America started dropping atom bombs anywhere.

French diplomatic advances indicate that the British consider this promise rather vague; that it might mean Washington would merely inform London that U.S. bombers were en route somewhere to deliver the bomb.

The French think Churchill would like to secure an understanding that the United States would not use the bomb anywhere without prior consultation and agreement with Britain.

American officials in Europe doubt that Churchill is likely to get such assurances. These officials recalled that President Truman has made it clear in the past that the United States must reserve the ultimimate right to decide if and when America should use the bomb.

It is considered highly improbable by these officials that Congress would condone the granting to any other Allied power, even Britain, the right to exercise veto power over America's use of its atom bomb unless and until Soviet Russia agrees to an effective system for international control and inspection of atomic weapons.

However, the possibility is foreseen that Churchill may succeed in getting some clarification concerning the circumstances under which the American strategic bombers based in Britain would be instructed to launch atomic attacks.

It is thought possible by American official circles abroad that President Truman may agree to consult rather than merely inform Britain in advance of British-based United States bombers being given orders to launch an atomic attack against Russia in the event of war.

Those political elements in Britain who lack confidence in American governmental leadership in world affairs have been showing increased concern recently over the existence of America's atomic air base in East Anglia.

This concern was reflected by Churchill when he told Commons last month, "it must not be forgotten that we took peculiar risks in providing the principal atomic base for the United States in East Anglia, and that in consequence we placed ourselves in the very forefront of Soviet antagonism."

Clearly implying at the time that Britain wanted at least consultation before use of the bomb by British-based American planes, Churchill added:

"We have therefore every need and every right to seek and receive the fullest consideration from Americans for our point of view and I feel sure this will not be denied us."

Grand Jury May Probe Lang Case

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Dec. 15 (AP).—The district attorney got the silent treatment today and threatened to go to the Grand Jury to make people talk in the Walter Wanger triangle shooting.

He tried unsuccessfully to question the victim, Jennings Lang, and then Mrs. Lang. Finally, obviously exasperated after two hours, he announced:

"Certain people apparently are persisting in defying the duly constituted agencies which are attempting to procure evidence. If this persistence on their part continues, the County Grand Jury will be requested to subpoena every person who refuses to co-operate."

Lang was shot down in a parking lot Thursday night as he talked with Wanger's wife, ravenhaired Joan Bennett. Wanger was taken in custody immediately and declared to police:

"I shot him because he tried to break up my home."

This Miss Bennett and Lang, her agent, denied, the latter in a statement issued yesterday through his wife. Both said their relations were purely business, and expressed the hope that the matter would be dropped.

But S. Ernest Roll, the district attorney, said flatly: "A felony charge will be filed against Wanger."

On the cost of medical care

Many of the current prolonged discussions on the high cost of medical care are without foundation. Although it is true that drugs and medical services cost more now than they did ten years ago, the rise in cost has not been out of proportion to the increase in the prices of other commodities and services. The cost of a physician's call is no greater than that of a plumber or an electrician. The cost of the medicine he prescribes is no higher than the cost of a valve, a faucet, or an electrical outlet. Moreover, it must be remembered that money cannot buy good health. It is priceless. No finer, no more economical, no more efficient system of medical care has ever been devised than that which this nation now enjoys.

Municipal Boards Chosen

SATURDAY'S polling in Victoria's neighboring municipalities completed the roster of civic and district elections in the Greater Victoria area. The incoming boards and their leaders will take office next month, to face many problems that are shared in common and some that are distinct to individual municipalities. In a true sense, however, they all represent the same geographical and economic region, and through good will and co-operation can mutually assist each other in the multitude of things that must be done on behalf of more than 100,000 people inhabiting this section of Vancouver Island. Over and above the separate tasks of each municipality will be the continuing need for realistic teamwork on the part of all of them. That might well be the first resolution of the new year.

We would commend to all those honored with the trust of public office at the polls, and to those who put them there, the thoughtful utterance of Mayor Percy E. George, retiring now after seven consecutive years as chief magistrate. Speaking at a luncheon assembly recently, His Worship said in part: "Today criticism is one of our cheapest commodities—everybody seems to be too busy to take time out to look into facts. People must display a spirit of faith, patience and tolerance towards those elected . . ." Mayor George enlarged on this theme, but the essence of it is there. Having chosen, the electors must have faith in those whom they selected; and, being elected, each individual in public office must do his or her part on the team.

With a representative quota of well-seasoned opinion on its public boards and committees, citizens in the Greater Victoria area have no reason either to belittle its status or to take a dim view of the future. On the contrary, with fast developing settlement and broader opportunities than ever before, this region of Vancouver Island can and should hold its own with the best if these municipal teams work together and

Save a Dollar—Spend Two

NEXT year the department of transport will abandon its longtime practice of employing house-to-house canvassers to collect the $2.50 annual radio license fee. After April 1 owners must buy their licenses from post offices or dealers. An estimated $100,000 in commissions thus will be saved, but without benefit to the broadcasting services for whose support the fee is levied. The department has announced that the money saved will go towards the salaries of a new corps of officials to be hired to check, inspect and prosecute delinquents. Save a dollar—spend two.

The license system has proved to be neither a fair nor a practical way of financing broadcasting. It has been stated that there are hundreds of thousands of unlicensed radios whose owners have been enjoying for years the entertainment paid for in part by license holders. Of those fees which the department succeeds in collecting, 12 per cent goes to pay the upkeep of the collection service and therefore is of no benefit to broadcasting. The $5,571,000 paid in license fees last year, while it may seem a large sum, actually was less than half the amount which the C.B.C. claims it needs.

In all these circumstances would it not have been better to have abandoned the license nuisance altogether instead of trying to patch the system at larger cost than before? The principle of state assistance has been approved, parliament having adopted the policy of giving the C.B.C. an annual subsidy of $6,250,000 for the next four years. Then why not let the treasury take the whole load, since by whatever means the C.B.C. is financed the money comes out of the pockets of the Canadian people? It seems reasonable to believe that at least nine out of 10 homes have radios of some sort. As it is now, many a poor man's $2.50 helps to pay for the entertainment of well-to-do owners who are evading the fee.

The Endless Flow

WHOM the disease of talking once possesseth, said Ben Jonson, he can never hold his peace. How true. Witness the House of Commons, where a resolution to cut the length of speeches from 40 to 30 minutes was defeated.

M.P.'s have to talk, undoubtedly. That is the medium through which their work is accomplished. But need there be so much of it? The most cursory glance at any copy of Hansard betrays the endless and so often needless flow of speech. Every member seems bent on taking his full allotted time, even though what he says invariably could be cut in half with advantage both to his hearers and his subject.

It would not matter if members were merely boring one another; they would deserve their own punishment. In the end it is the nation's affairs that suffer, however. Tongues run dry or limp from too much use mean that in the closing periods of each session laws are rushed through without proper scrutiny, often without awareness or understanding on the part of most of the House. So much speechifying takes up so much valuable time that governments take advantage of the exhaustion that eventually descends.

This is an old complaint, and as applicable to the provincial legislature as to the Ottawa parliament. There is far too much petty parochial detail aired at exorbitant length at the expense of serious business. One might think members would jump at the opportunity to hold their peace a little, but no. As Ottawa has demonstrated, so fascinated are M.P.'s with their own eloquence they refuse to reduce the quota by a mere 10 minutes.

TELEVISION FUND

Sir,—May I request just a little more of your valuable space before we close the T.B. Pavilion Television Set Fund for the Royal Jubilee Hospital? This time, on behalf of the "Smile Show," I would like to thank the press, the local radio stations, service clubs, organizations, business firms and the hundreds of generous citizens who contributed so spontaneously and generously towards the collection of nearly $1,100. We are grateful to the enthusiastic patients who, under the direction of Miss Mary Irving, the clinic supervisor, worked so hard to make our appeal such a great success.

SERVICE MAIL

Sir,—We have just been notified that the letter rate to naval personnel serving with our Far East (Korea) destroyer division is now seven cents. I presume that this also affects the army and and air force.

This is a very stupid and short-sighted policy to impose upon the friends and relatives of these men who are risking their lives to prevent the scourge of Communism from spreading to our shores.

Canada has announced to the world at large that she is now a nation in her own right and is entitled to her own flag with all the other privileges of nationhood; which is very right and proper. In other words, she has become of age. Then why not be our age.

It is not the extra three cents per letter that is my chief cause of complaint, but the effect on the morale of our armed forces.

Are our leaders unable to grasp the fact that a self-respecting independent nation should give to her armed forces, especially when they are at war, all the privileges due them?

It should be done in order that they may be proud of Canada and behoven to none; to know that Canada is 100 per cent behind them.

Instead, they have to rely on other nations for their auxiliary services, and now the increase of postal rates to them.

If ever a government wanted to have their armed services, to use our expression of the Second World War, "browned off," our present government is doing its best. Meanwhile the call goes out for recruits and we are told to keep the boys' morale up by writing to them often.

It seems that Mr. Abbott has found another indirect source to help swell his surplus of $350,000,000 to $850,000,000.

I would suggest he use this surplus to keep the armed services postal rates down, including parcels and get the auxiliary services started.

The excuse given for not having these services is pure piffle. Those of us who have had the use of these services, especially on return from the front line, know what a god-send they are.

I have been given to understand from local sources that the five-cent air mail letter do not travel any quicker to the navy.

INSURANCE CLAIMS

Sir,—I read with interest the reasons given by the Insurance Federation on the pending raise of automobile insurance rates in The Daily Colonist, Nov. 30. The one reason given regarding court judgments as having been "much more generous."

What unmitigated gall there is in that statement. The article did not state why court judgment was necessary in a claim over damages or injuries. Perhaps the insurers felt they need not pay on the grounds that negligence could not be proved. Or possibly the factor of mechanical failure was brought into the light showing no negligence on any party concerned with the claim.

In a suit of this nature the insurance company never seems to come before the public eye. Why? Usually it is the driver or operator of the auto responsible for the accident who gets his name published, rarely an insurance company, which is the main defendant in a case of this nature.

I wonder if the average automobile driver knows that when he or she gets injured in an accident of this nature that usually, if negligence cannot be proved, they stand very little chance of getting a penny.

This is rather close to fact, as I myself know. It took me nearly two years to collect damages on a permanent injury brought on by an automobile accident. Only through my going to the Supreme Court of British Columbia did I gain payment.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

I AM beginning this, I fear, as I am apt to begin a letter when I begin a letter, which is not nearly so often as it ought to be—without a notion in my head as to what might come after.

There is so much that happens nowadays, and all at once. The job is to sort out the impressions, they fall one on top of the other before you can draw a free breath. This past week now, my mind reeled under the impacts.

Mackenzie King, for instance. Maclean's tells me that for 25 years before his death he was a secret spiritualist, although why that should evoke surprise I don't know since he was a good man at keeping secrets, and if he talked with F. D. R. through a medium in London well, that was his business. To each his own sacred beliefs. Still, the revelation was intriguing. So was the retirement of No. 5, the shirt (or is it sweater?) that Mr. DiMaggio wore as a proud New York Yankee. It took a long time for Joseph to turn down $100,000 (absurd sum) which might have been his for one year had his decrepit 37-year-old bones not ached in protest. He is to become a TV jockey at half that amount. It's comforting to know he won't starve.

The man, or rather men, of the week were of course the heroes in THE great election. I capitalize because of the rousing, lusty campaign, which was so hearty an affair it implied a 100-per-cent ballot to come, whereas—half the voters stayed home. Democracy in action, demonstrating the right not to do what's too much bother to do, or at least not more than by halves. Strange, too. Four out of the top five aldermanic victors were repeaters, suggesting a solid respect for continuity; while the mayoralty winner was an outsider, suggesting the opposite.

Suggestion is a great thing. There was the suggestion of one of our chaps here that the editorial staff should go smokeless for a day in order to enrich our Korean Cigarette Fund box, with dire monetary penalties attached for violation of the ukase. If you could see me writhe with agony as I write this piece your heart would be (I hope) wrung with sympathy. For me it is a vain struggle. 'Twice since beginning this epistle I have lapsed at 10 cents a lapse, which you'll admit is severe toll for the pawky soul a born Scotsman is alleged to possess. I expect to be mulcted of a small fortune before the day is over.

Which incidentally reminds me of the boys in Korea, and my thanks to those good folk who keep adding to the fund. Every nickel is welcome. That cease-fire we were hoping for seems to be as far away as ever, and so keep the cigarettes rolling. Talking about fire, and putting talk and fire together, I wish Mr. Vishinsky would hold his back. What are you to make of a man who vows with one breath to work hard for amity and with the very next one he draws launches into his old, old diatribes of hate. I'm afraid I wouldn't trust Vishy as far as I could throw him, and as he's more corpulent that I am I doubt that would be any great distance.

The U.N., of course, and unfortunately too, produces some queer (and petulant) distortions. Vide South Africa, whose delegate stalks out in anger because the General Assembly dares to discuss a matter he doesn't want discussed. Little selfish children at play do it my way or I won't join in the game. Tragic thought, really. Won't the world ever grow up! That makes me cynical, so I merely cross my fingers when someone in Bonn, Germany, says that of a surety Kurt Meyer has no chance of getting into a new German army.

A more pleasant German note was struck at the symphony concert last week when a certified virtuoso of the French horn straight from the land of Mozart displayed the talent he will add henceforth to our orchestral delight. Honesty compels me to say that as a solo instrument the French horn beats not too musically on my eardrums, but that is a minor consideration. A hearty welcome to Mr. Stelzner. And one also to Santa Claus, whom I see around town in various postures these days, reminding me that Yuletide is nigh and I have many cards to look out, and that perhaps enough has been said for this morning. Any more, perhaps, would spoil the Sabbath for you, and therefore the Christmas spirit now welling up from within.

Practical Approach to Disarmament

By W. N. EWER, from London

SERIOUS discussion of the very serious and difficult problems involved in the negotiation of any international agreement for the reduction of armaments tends, in these days, to get unhappily smothered in an atmosphere of polemics and irrelevancies. It was only too characteristic that when, early in November, the three Western powers produced the first definite proposals since earlier disarmament commissions had to give up their work in despair, Vishinsky's first reaction was one of derision. "I laughed so much that I could not sleep," he told a somewhat astonished U.N. Assembly.

His second reaction was to suggest that as a preliminary to any negotiation for the reduction of armaments the Assembly should declare that membership of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is incompatible with membership of the United Nations.

Such flippancy hardly arouses confidence in the genuineness of the Soviet government's professions of her desire for a reduction of armaments. And, unless there is such a genuine desire, the chances of any progress at all seem rather small.

Nevertheless, the United Kingdom government and its associates are resolved to treat a serious subject seriously, and to approach difficult problems in a practical spirit, neither underestimating or ignoring the difficulties, nor, on the other hand, being deterred or dismayed by them.

The essence of the proposals first put forward by the three Western powers at the beginning of November is precisely to try to secure agreement on a program, on a method of approach, which would at any rate have some chance of leading to practical results. It may not be spectacular, but it is practical.

Let me take the first question of what are now, rather oddly, always referred to as "conventional armaments," in other words, the strength of armed forces and all weapons except atomic ones.

Here the approach suggested is surely the common sense and practical one. It is that the objective shall be "regulation, limitation and balanced reduction" of armies and armaments: To this end, the first step must be "disclosure and verification" of the level of existing armaments.

That is surely reasonable enough. It is surely essential that before we begin talking about reducing something, whe should know what, in each case, the something is. Strength of armaments, so long as armaments exist at all, is clearly a relative matter. If it were not, there would be no need for any interpational agreement. Each nation would fix the strength of its own forces without taking in any way into account the strength of those of the other countries. That, as Euclid would have said, is absurd. Yet, it is exactly what the Soviet government, for the past three years, has been asking the Western powers to do. It has been insistently demanding that they shall undertake to reduce the strength of their own forces to two-thirds of its present level before the Russian government will even disclose its own present strength. This is an obviously impossible proposition.

"Disclosure and verification" — a frank statement of the problem before it is tackled — is therefore the first principle on which the three-power program is based. The second is that the objective of a conference or commission must be to reach agreement on the "criteria" by which the permitted size of the armaments of each country must be calculated.

Now that is admittedly an exceedingly difficult task, as we discovered during the 1932 disarmament conference. It is easy enough to say, for example, that the number of the armed forces of any country should be proportional to its population. But what is the number of the armed forces? Does it include only men under arms, or does it include "trained reserves"? Are highly-trained long-service troops and reservists who have had only a few months' training to be treated for statistical purposes as equals? What about armed police and "parliamentary" bodies? Anybody who remembers the long debates of 1932 and 1933 in Geneva will realize that these are questions which cannot be simply brushed aside. They are the problems which have to be solved if agreements are going to be reached.

It is easy enough to say that the strength of fleets might be proportional to the length of coastlines. But such a rule would give Canada and the Soviet Union far stronger navies than the U.S.A. — though most of their coasts are in icebound Arctic seas. To make fleets proportional to the number of merchant ships under the national flag would make Panama one of the chief naval powers. It is useless to ignore or burke such difficulties. The fixing of reasonable criteria is bound to be both difficult and complicated. Yet it will have to be done if any kind of agreement is going to be reached. Armaments cannot be fixed without some sort of rule for fixing them. That seems self-evident. Which is why the three powers have laid down agreement on the criteria as an essential second step.

It is not an easy path that they are proposing. But it is the only possible path. There are no short cuts. And any attempts to strike across country would simply lead into a bog.

The question of atomic weapons is in a different category, because in this case the objective is not reduction but abolition and prohibition. That is agreed. And it also seems to be agreed that abolition must involve some kind of international control and supervision. And here it should be noted that the Western powers are not insisting on the plan adopted and accepted by the majority of the U.N. Commission and only rejected by the Soviet Union and its associates. They suggest that it shall be taken as a basis for discussion. But they are perfectly willing to discuss alternatives and to accept any "better and more effective plan that can be devised."

They do, however, insist that abolition and control must go together. They cannot agree to a convention for banning the use and possession of atom bombs unless and until an effective system of control is in operation, or is quite certain to come into operation simultaneously. That again is surely no more than reasonable.

The essential feature of the three-power proposals is in fact, that they call for a practical approach to practical and difficult problems. They discard all idea of dramatic rhetorical (and barren) declarations. We have had too many of these in the past; and they have led nowhere. They may arouse momentary enthusiasms, but the sequel is disappointment and a sense of frustration and something like despair. Equally, the three powers are trying to break away from mere controversy, from exploitation of the general desire for disarmament as a weapon of irrelevant propaganda. Their proposals do not underrate the difficulties of reaching agreement. They ask that these difficulties shall be faced and that an honest and determined effort shall be made to overcome them.

Nobody, of course, expects or has expected that they shall be accepted as they stand. They are put forward not as a rigid program but as a basis for a program. And, whatever their fate at the moment, it seems clear to me that if there is to be any genuine attempt to secure agreement on the general reduction of armaments, it can only be along some such lines as these.

Victoria in Beard and Crinoline

From Files of The Daily British Colonist for December, 1864

By G. E. MORTIMORE

WE KNOW you can't please all the people all the time. Some public officials, because of the difficult nature of their jobs, find it hard to please any of the people any of the time.

Certain officials are bogeymen, or perhaps public whipping boys. Whatever goes wrong, they are blamed for it.

A case in point was the gold commissioner at Vancouver Island's Leech River mines. One Sans Souci, a sardonic correspondent of The Daily British Colonist, outlined the miners' attitude toward the unhappy man as follows:

"The commissioner has been away for about a week, meanwhile we rest upon our pick-handles in a state of glorious uncertainty. Apropos of that gentleman, it has become, or rather always was, the 'rage' to abuse that official.

"If a claim did not pay, if the flour was damaged, if another company happened to be doing well, the chagrin therefrom arising was sure to be expended upon that devoted head.

"I enquired of a miner a short time ago what he had against the commissioner. 'Oh! he is too small for the situation—they ought to have a larger man.' Quantity is all very well, but I am not aware that commissioners are generally dealt out by the pound at headquarters."

The correspondent lodged a wry complaint that Victoria ignored Leech River after going into a mild stampede toward the place. The river was high, and logs came crashing downstream.

"Need I say that river mining has received its quietus for the season? Some . . . mutter curses both loud and deep . . . and bid a long farewell to the last-born Eldorado. Others . . . purpose prospecting in the benches and gullies for winter diggings. . . .

"The government buildings are in progress, including a gaol—almost an unnecessary item considering the peaceable character of our mining population. . . . Doubtless we shall soon be visited by a number of Cariboolites when they become satiated with the intoxicating pleasures of . . . your city. May they show us the 'Golden Fountain'."

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

SLOWLY but surely, Canadians are developing an accent peculiar to themselves. It is apparent mostly in place-names at the present time. Montreal is Muntry-awl to millions of us. Ottawa is slowly becoming O-d'a-w-u-h. Toronto has been Tronna or Terawnta for a couple of generations.

Hamilton, a very beautiful name, has been Hamil'n for as long as I can recall. The last syllable is not pronounced as a syllable, but merely as a sort of small sneeze or snort, back up in the nose.

Some cities defy all tampering. Winnipeg comes forth complete, even in the mouths of brand newcomers. Vancouver, Regina, Calgary do not lend themselves to the slur. But beautiful Niagara has been Nagra Falls for 50 years.

In the country, villages and townships come in for some remarkable localization of pronunciation. There is a village named Terra Nova in one of the finest trout-fishing areas in Ontario which I knew as Turnover for years and years and visited countless times before I discovered, on looking at a map, that it was Terra Nova.

There is nothing odd or unusual about Canadians developing a characteristic style of speech. The English and Americans, both of whom use the same language we do, pronounce their words as they see fit, especially their place-names. And the Scots are terrific. A few miles apart on the River Dee are the villages of Peterculter and Cults. The former is pronounced Petercooter; the latter Cults, just as it looks. When you suggest to a local Scot that Cults should be Coots, he is amused. He can show you far stranger things than that: Lock Mulck, near Balmoral, is nothing more or less than Lock Mick. Not a trace of that protuberant U. Plain Mick. So what's wrong with Nagra?

R.C.A.F. Families Voice Resentment Of Living Quarters at English Camp

NORTH LUFFENHAM, Rutland, England, Dec. 15 (CP).—Forty Canadian families live in a trailer camp on bleak grasslands near this new R.C.A.F. station, and some of them don't like it a bit.

LAC. Leonard Brame of Vancouver and Stettler, Alta., his Scottish wife Doreen and three young children occupy a rented caravan which affords living space about equal to that of a hall in a small Canadian house. But smiling Mrs. Brame says cheerfully "we know we just have to put up with it."

Others are less stoical. For Mrs. Beverly Greig, wife of LAC. D. M. Greig of Toronto, life in North Luffenham has been "two months of misery."

"Tell them we want to go home," said Mrs. Greig. "Canada was never like this."

With two visiting friends nodding approval as she spoke, Mrs. Greig claimed that her 15-month-old daughter Donna has to sleep on a damp mattress; that rats had torn the baby's buggy apart; and that there is "no real supervision" at the trailer camp.

Mrs. Freda Smalley, whose husband comes from Leaside, Ont., and Mrs. B. G. Lapier, of Trenton, Ont., with her corporal husband, chimed in with complaints about the atrocious English climate, primitive bathing facilities, lack of transportation and lack of water.

Mrs. Kathleen King, who formerly lived in a four-roomed flat with her husband, Cpl. A. J. King of Montreal, disagreed. She said there is "certainly no hardship" and added she likes being able to get cheap milk for the baby and plenty of canned fruit.

Most R.C.A.F. officers deplore conditions at the trailer camp, which they admit is hardly a paradise. But they can't see any alternative. Soon, they hope, conditions will be improved by a barracks and community centre.

The camp stands in flat grassland rendered damp and dispiriting by rain and—fog. The caravans may be modern or their yellow paint may be peeling, but all are tiny. Gas stoves leave a faint, unpleasant smell. Yet the Canadians pay rents ranging from £3 to £5 a week.

Not far away are clean, white-washed, prefab-style emergency married quarters, housing 16 families, and 30 brick permanent quarters which formerly provided accommodation for 79 R.A.F. families. These are all full. Some Canadian families live in nearby hotels.

Generally, the decision seems to be to accept the housing shortage at "Little Canada," as North Luffenham is sometimes called, as just part of the growing pains inevitable in moving to a new air base.

Wenceslas Fable Exposed

Mongolians Get Into Yule Carol Act

By BRIAN LOUGHNAN

There is more to some of the fine old carols that will presently be sung throughout the land than meets the ear.

Take, for instance, "Good King Wenceslas" who was apparently leaning out of some castle window-sill, idly snapping his gum and thinking of nothing at all?

Oh no! He had reasons.

The snow lay round about, deep and crisp and even, according to the words of the song. Good King Wenceslas was probably wondering if the crust of the snow would support a horse.

The moon shone brightly on the snow, and the king may likely have been biting his nails over the fact that it was bright enough outside to see well enough to fire an arrow.

He was harking back to the days when the Mongols of Ghengis Khan overrode Europe, knocking over several European teams on their home grounds.

Good King Wenceslas, who ruled Bohemia, gathered an army of about 20,000 and sallied forth against the Mongols.

He and three of his men escaped after the Mongols packed up and pushed on westwards. The rest of his army broke up into pained fragments.

So, when a poor man hove into view on the night he was looking out, it gave the king quite a jolt.

The second verse gives the whole thing away:

"Hither, page, and stand by me,
If thou knowest, telling,
Yonder peasant, who is he?
Where and what his dwelling?"

Obviously the good king thought it might be a Mongol [illegible] of a poor man gathering faggots. While the page, one of the survivors of the battle, was trying to catch a profile of the man in the snow, Good King Wenceslas listened for the peculiar hum of the long Mongol arrows.

But the page, recognizing a local fuel dealer out after wood, reassured the king. "Sire, he lives a good league hence, underneath the mountain."

And the king was so happy to discover that the poor peasant was actually just a poor peasant and wine and hurried off to the chap's house to drink with him, thus all unknowingly starting this round of seasonal gift-giving.

However, to his credit, the good king did not back down from his good intentions when the peasant was proved harmless. As the carol says:

"Ye who now will bless the poor, shall yourselves find blessing."

Korean Testifies Against Canadian

By BILL BOSS

SEOUL, Dec. 15 (CP).—Frail Shin Hyong Chong today described his father's shooting and told of being shot himself the night a Canadian soldier allegedly went on a shooting rampage.

John Murray Steeves of Moncton, N.B., and Regina, a sapper with the Royal Canadian Engineers, is charged with the murder of a South Korean civilian Sept. 17 in the village of Hwang Bang, southwest of Yon Chon. He is being tried before a court martial.

The 17-year-old Shin said he could recognize the gunwielder because the man had visited the Shin home three times.

Today's hearing was a day of contradiction after contradiction in evidence given by Canadian, British, American and Korean witnesses.

Interpreters were changed and all Korean evidence was reread by Lee Jung Ok, the chief interpreter for the Princess Patricias Canadian Light Infantry.

Steeves is alleged to have fired bursts from a Sten gun in the Shin home while ostensibly seeking a watch he claimed to have been stolen. Shin Yong Dok, 41, was wounded fatally and two other Koreans were wounded.

Spr. A. E. Bovard, of Moncton, testified he drove a truck from the section where Steeves was employed.

The day before the shooting, "Steeves was pretty well loaded already when we drove off for work at 1.30 p.m.," he said. "We had two quart bottles of gin. Steeves and others were leveling the ground as I was dumping it (his load) from a truck. Steeves was in no shape to work he just leaned on his shovel. By the time we came back from work we 'kinda' had a load on that truck."

Bovard said he loaded Steeves onto the truck at four o'clock and on arriving at camp, stopped the vehicle outside Steeves' tent and helped him in. Steeves went to sleep.

Spr. A. J. McLean, Sydney, N.S., was on guard that night. He said he saw Steeves in his tent at 10.45 p.m. and at 11.30 p.m. and Steeves was staggering both times.

After being taken into custody and after the casualties of the shooting incident had been attended to, Steeves was taken to a field ambulance for medical examination by Capt. Brian Marshall, Toronto.

Capt. Marshall said: "He seemed to be recovering from the alcohol stimulus. He walked deliberately as though he didn't trust his feet but did not stumble. He used the tentpole for support. There was a smell of alcohol on his breath."

Lieut. R. D. W. Wheeler, British Army commander of the Commonwealth division guardroom, said that when Steeves was transferred to the guard room at 6.30 a.m. he was "extremely drunk—he practically fell through the doorway and I detailed two guards to support him and a third to carry his kit."

Lack of Autopsy Frees Murderer

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 15 (AP).—A confessed murderer was set free yesterday because no autopsy had been performed on his victim. The Mexican Supreme Court ruled that laws of the state in which the slaying occurred require an autopsy and the lack of one was sufficient to overrule the conviction.

Busy Year Heralded By Emergency State

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15 (AP).—Since President Truman declared a state of national emergency a year ago tomorrow, the United States has more than doubled its arms production and trebled its uniformed fighting forces.

Twenty-odd new "alphabetical" agencies have sprung up, 700 price orders are in force, and a web of production controls is slowing the civilian metal-using industries to a walk.

Despite two tax boosts totalling some $15,000,000,000, spending already has outrun revenue and red-ink financing has begun. The deficit in fiscal '53, starting next July 1, may be as great as the tax increases voted.

A three-year program has been developed, running through 1953. Scheduled of "minimum" security needs have been drawn up, in terms of scheduled deliveries of tank, plane and munitions production.

The president disclosed a few of the goals of mobilization. One called for 3,500,000 men under arms, as against about 1,000,000 then in uniform. That was achieved by midsummer.

Another target—a five-fold increase in warplane production—has not even been half reached, according to guarded information given out. Tanks are behind schedule but evidently not seriously.

The lags are enough, however, to cause the senate preparedness sub-committee to call for a "production czar" in the Pentagon to supervise procurement by all three services.

Defense outlays, which represented about 8 per cent of the countrys' total production a year ago, now amount to about 14 per cent. A year hence they may reach 18 or 20 per cent.

Under the stimulus of defense, the rate of national output has risen from about $300,000,000,000 annually to $330,000,000,000 over the year. The climb has leveled off in the last six months, however, because consumer goods industries have been cut back about as fast as defense plants have picked up.

Britain Recalls Diplomat Shot At by Czech Police

LONDON, Dec. 15 (AP).—Britain today called home a British diplomat whom the Czechoslovak secret police fired upon Friday night during a purported "act of espionage" in a forbidden zone of Czechoslovakia.

Prague radio claimed that the diplomat, Robert Neil Gardner, and a British embassy typist, Miss Daphne G. Maines, were caught red-handed exchanging money for secret military information.

Miss Maines was shot and slightly wounded and Gardner was bruised in a cloak-and-dagger chase while trying to escape in a British embassy automobile, the Czechs said.

The Foreign Office said it had Czechoslovakia's assurance that Miss Maines would be allowed to leave the country as soon as she is discharged from a Prague hospital. She had been due for reassignment, the Foreign Office reported.

Czechoslovakia handed the British embassy a note demanding that Gardner be recalled and quit the country before 6 p.m., Prague time, tonight.

The Foreign Office announced at noon that the diplomat would set out from Prague by automobile this afternoon.

A Foreign Office spokesman said Britain would not comment on the Czechs' charges until it had received a full report from its embassy.

The Czechs sent a formal note of protest saying Gardner and Miss Maines were caught Thursday night in "a military area northeast of Prague which was clearly marked out of bounds."

The note, according to a Czech broadcast, said the man entered a military area, took a package from the ground and placed another in its stead.

At that moment he was challenged and guards caught the man, together with a woman who had been waiting for him in a car.

The package contained 40,000 crowns (about $1,000) in bank notes, placed in a food tin.

An earlier Czech broadcast said the package taken by Gardner contained top-secret information dated as recently as Monday.

Emperor Otho was such a devotee of the perfumer's art that his equipment for a military campaign included a complete arsenal of essences and cosmetics.

Grain Call Set December 28

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C., Dec. 15 (CP).—Second vessel of the season to load grain from Prince Rupert elevator will be the Japanese steamer Yamateru Maru which is due here Dec. 28.

The Yamateru Maru, larger than the Kiyokawa Maru, the first ship which was here a few weeks ago and took 315,000 bushels, will load 360,000 bushels for Japan.

The elevator now has enough wheat in its bins to load two vessels and it is still moving in steadily.

Fifty per cent of the wheat being moved here is tough and the drier at the elevator is working 12 hours a day.

Clergy Defeat Tax Count

CHILLIWACK, Dec. 15 (CP).—Four clergymen here, ordered to pay a $20-a-year school tax, have won an appeal from a police court judgment.

Rev. George McKinnon and Rev. C. Vermuelin, both of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Rev. Geoffry Gower, Chilliwack United Church, and Rev. W. J. T. Clarke, St. Thomas' Anglican Church, won their appeal Friday in County Court.

Judge Harry Sullivan ruled the city's action was premature—seeking to collect a 1951 tax in October—and that it should have been held until the end of the year.

The school tax is levied on non-property owners and the clergymen claimed that they indirectly paid tax by being responsible for property on which the city has levied taxes.

Judge Sullivan agreed with their claim and said the clergymen could, if necessary, avoid the tax by taking out beneficiary ownership of property for which they were responsible.

Police Hold Fathers Who Staged Holdup

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 15 (AP).—Two St. Paul fathers were held without charge today after police said they admitted the $2,600 holdup of a tavern to buy Christmas presents for their 16 children. Officers identified the suspects as Jack Patraw, 36, father of 12 children, and George Lehan, 32, who has four.

Security Will Be Costly Eisenhower Emphasizes

PARIS, Dec. 15 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower today told European nations balking at increased military expenditures that their security will cost a lot of money and they must pay their share.

He made a blunt and sometimes angry speech to the 12-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization committee of planners, which has drafted a blueprint for bigger arms budgets among some members to build up European defenses.

His appearance dramatically underscored the problem that arose when some nations began rebelling against boosting their military spending in the fear that it would upset civilian affairs at home.

The problem, some observers feel, is as worrisome as Eisenhower's other major problems—that of getting West German soldiers into uniform.

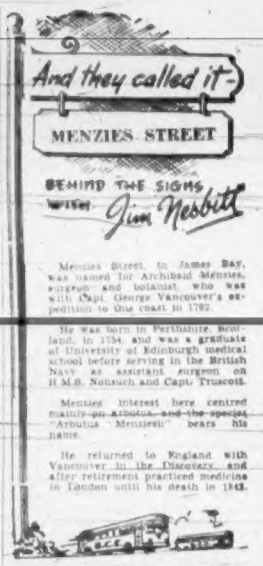
The supreme allied commander told the N.A.T.O. delegates they would have to rush through the buildup of a force sufficient to deter Russia, and only then "can we start thinking about lightening the defense burden."

"By carrying on, we can reach a point where it would be foolish for an enemy to attack," he promised.

Eisenhower is reported aiming for a force of some 40 divisions in combat-readiness by the end of 1952; 60 or more by 1954.

The N.A.T.O. committee report is described as a "firm, precise [illegible] for 1953 and 1954 which will be reviewed annually to meet changing conditions, developments of new weapons and other factors."

To get 40 divisions by the end of 1952, the committee is reported asking eight of the 12 N.A.T.O. nations to do better than they are doing now.



And they called it—
MENZIES STREET
BEHIND THE SIGNS
with Jim Nesbitt
Menzies Street, in James Bay, was named for Archibald Menzies, surgeon and botanist, who was with Capt. George Vancouver's expedition to this coast in 1792.
He was born in Perthshire, Scotland, in 1754, and was a graduate of University of Edinburgh medical school before serving in the British Navy as assistant surgeon on H.M.S. Nonsuch and Capt. Truscott.
Menzies' interest here centred mainly on Arbutus, and the species "Arbutus Menziesii" bears his name.
He returned to England with Vancouver in the Discovery, and after retirement practiced medicine in London until his death in 1843.

Anonymous Appeal Received For Salvation From Reds

By KINGSBURY SMITH

PARIS, Dec. 15 (INS). An anonymous appeal to the United Nations to save Hungary from the "barbaric terror" of Soviet domination was received by this correspondent today in a letter postmarked from Budapest.

The appeal was a Hungarian language article contained in a page inserted inside one of the leading Communist newspapers in Hungary, the Szabad Nep, which means "free people."

Precautions were taken to distract the attention of the Hungarian censorship from the Russian-language article.

The article started with a preamble in Russian, explaining that once a week the newspaper would publish "a simple Russian article for those of you who are already familiar with the language of our great ally in order to make the close spiritual relationship between the people of the Soviet and ourselves even closer, and to enable each citizen of our people's republic eventually to absorb the real spirit of Marxism in the language of our great teacher Lenin, as interpreted by the great leader, Stalin."

Text of the article under the heading "An Appeal to the United Nations," then stated: "We are compelled to publish this appeal in the Russian language, for written in Western language it would not pass Hungarian censorship."

INTENDED TO MISLEAD

The letter addressed to this correspondent, which contained the copy of Szabad Nep, also included a note typewritten in Hungarian apparently intended to mislead the censorship.

"The enclosed newspaper, Szabad Nep," the note read, "refutes the baseless slanders of imperialistic warmongers. The Hungarian people, who are great friends of the Soviet Union, do everything possible to associate our nation with Russian culture."

The envelope bore a Budapest postmark showing that it had been mailed on Nov. 18. It also carried as the return address the imprint of the Budapest headquarters of the Communist-controlled Hungarian leather industry workers union.

The inserted sheet which contained this article, although otherwise similar to the rest of the newspaper, appeared to be of somewhat better newsprint quality and print.

It looked as if the regular inside page of Szabad Nep had been taken out and the specially-published sheet inserted.

RISK INVOLVED

If the letter actually was posted in Budapest, as the stamps indicated, it must have involved some risk for the sender. Under existing Communist restrictions in Hungary, all foreign-addressed letters must be taken to the post office for mailing and cannot be dropped in street corner postal boxes.

Asserting that the senders were risking their lives to get the appeal out of Hungary, the Russian language article said:

"This is an appeal of the citizens of a desperate nation who are aware of the possible consequences of this act, who are endangering the lives of some of the members of our group, but even at the ultimate cost of ourselves, we have to turn to the free nations of the world, lest our entire national existence be exterminated.

"Denied the protection of our own 'government,' divested from the usual minimum rights enjoyed even by the least advanced peoples, without the right or possibility of protest or petition, our enchained nation has been subjected to a barbaric terror by a small group of foreign despots.

"The very meaning of life has ceased to exist in Hungary, and if by the sacrifice of our own lives we secure the assistance of the free nations of the world to our unfortunate country, we shall be glad to accept our fate.

"It must be no secret in the free world that under the protection of the Soviet bayonets, the control of our country was seized by a small group of Soviet citizens (albeit most of them of Hungarian descent) who—with the cruelty of fanatics)—have turned Hungary into a prison, surrounded by barbed wires and land mines, so that no unfortunate prisoner might escape.

"Even internal movement in our prison-country is stringently controlled, for no one is free to travel without innumerable documents and police permits, which are granted or denied at the pleasure of the secret police.

RUSSIAN COLONY

"The United Nations and the free world must know by this time that Hungary, for over a thousand years a member of the community of nations, has been turned into a Russian colony and subjected to callous exploitation by them."

The article added that the Hungarian people were being treated with "extreme brutality," far worse than slaves were treated in the ancient times when their owners at least were concerned with the physical well-being of their property.

"In agriculturally rich Hungary that was once called the granary of eastern Europe we have to stand for hours in long queues to receive a miserable, insufficient weekly ration of food, hardly enough to sustain life.

"Hundreds of thousands of our under-developed and under-fed children are being snatched from the school benches at the ages of nine and ten to undergo military training in preparation of the 'defense' of their country. Which country?

"We are being divested of all phases of our ancient western culture and the spirit of Christianity is being replaced by a hymn of hate propagated by our press and radio and at the Communist indoctrination classes which we are forced to attend 'voluntarily' after work.

"Even our priests and ministers are forced to fall in line with this ruthless Communist policy.

BREAKING-POINT

"While we are forced to subscribe to base Soviet 'peace' positions, our industry is geared to the breaking point in producing war material, while a cake of soap is all but unobtainable in our country.

"Food stuff as well as industrial products are syphoned off to the U.S.S.R., and there is no hope of our people ever reaching even the relatively low standard of life that prevailed before the war."

Protesting against the "forcible uprooting from their homes of tens of thousands" of Hungarians who have been deported, the article appealed to the United Nations to "find means to stop the inhuman crime of mass deportations."

Plans to Oust Chiang

Close-up of Gen. Li Tsung-jen, former president of Nationalist China, now living in New York, says he will seek to regain the presidency of Nationalist China and claimed he has a "plan" to oust Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. The former president refused to detail the plans of his "coup" or whether he intended to use force. He claimed Chiang violated China's 40-year-old constitution when he "forcibly" regained the presidential post without an election.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Soils Specialist Back From Parley

G. R. Webster, soils specialist of the Experimental Station, Saanichton, returned recently from a three-day conference of irrigation specialists in Lethbridge, Alberta.

Techniques for measuring the amount of water needed by growing crops and the equipment needed to carry out the measurements were discussed by representatives from the three Prairie provinces and British Columbia.

Society Promises Secrecy For Dog-Killer Informant

The S.P.C.A., still on the trail of those responsible for throwing a seven-week-old puppy from the window of a car two weeks ago, said last night that the names of anyone giving information about the case would be kept confidential.

It is felt by society officials that many persons know the person or persons guilty and are holding back because they are afraid that something would happen later.

Reward of $100 still stands, officials said.

Union Maturity Seen By University Writer

ON THE LABOR FRONT

By BILL MAYOR

Labor will come to real manhood when it steps into the rewarding and dignified field of business, according to an article in the Canadian Unionist (C.C.L.).

The article is by Dr. M. M. Coady, director of the extension department, St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, Nova Scotia. It is titled "Labor Develops Through Co-operation."

Since the 1930's, "national income or production has increased in Canada over six times in the last 15 years. It is even greater in the United States. To those who are superciliously critical of labor, this should be a sobering fact. We are not hinting that wages and farm income should go up six times, but this great increase in the measure of production should make us consider sympathetically the claims of labor and farmers," he states.

"While real wages have not increased, the 'take home' share of business has continuously gone up. Profits after taxes earned by Canadian industry as a whole in 1950 were $1,402,000,000, an increase of 76 per cent over 1946," Dr. Coady states in quoting C.C.L. research figures.

Higher wages in most cases don't give a relatively higher portion of the national income. If labor is to get its share, then it must be an absolute greater part of the national income, also holding true for farmers, by means of total economic co-operation, he continues.

Any appraisal of the economic situation discloses that through business the "real rulers of democracies get their economic and political power," the writer states.

Economic co-operation is a technique by which it can be done safely and efficiently, Dr. Coady adds.

Results of a program of adult education and economic co-operation in the Maritime provinces would indicate a very great possibility of such a movement among farmers, fishermen, coal miners, steel workers and representatives of other industrial groups, he concludes.

DEATH BENEFITS

Duncan local of the I.W.A., the largest on Vancouver Island with about 5,000 members, is a step ahead of what may become I.W.A. district policy.

Provision has been made for temporary by-laws of a death benefit fund, Edward Haw, Victoria I.W.A. organizer, states he believes the benefit fund will be widely discussed at the district convention in Vancouver next month. The fund would be administered from union dues, he indicated.

Many other unions already have the fund in operation, providing a stabilizing effect on what otherwise might be a fluctuating membership total.

MEETINGS

C.C.L. unions meeting this week include C.B.R.E., Div. 276, Thursday, and Victoria Labor Council, Wednesday.

T.L.C. unions meeting are: Carpenters, riggers and painters, Monday; electricians and operating engineers, Tuesday; T.L.C. council and laundry drivers, Wednesday; milk salesmen, bakery salesmen and painters, Thursday; laborers and sheet-metal workers, Friday.

Costumed Square Dance Set For Monday in City Ballroom

First costumed square dance of the season will be held in the Lower Ballroom of the Crystal Garden Monday night starting at 8.30. The event is sponsored by the Victoria Pro Rec.

Women attending the affair will wear colorful and voluminous cotton skirts with gay blouses. Men are expected to appear in checked shirts and jeans.

Mrs. Gwen Joyce, square dance instructress states this is the first square dancing social event this season, and the first time Pro Rec dancers have ever dressed in costume.

LONDON (CP). — Once more the Royal Mint will produce gold sovereigns, but not for circulation. The coins will form part of the country's gold reserve.

Avalanche Hurls Trucks Into Sea

OSLO, Norway, Dec. 15 (AP). —A huge snow avalanche hurled two trucks into the sea yesterday. The driver of one was killed. The two occupants of the other truck managed to break a window and crawl to safety.

EXPERT THIEVES

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP)—Police believe thieves who stole 25 chickens from the farm of Carman Perry at Tupperville were experts who killed the chickens on the spot. Another 13 chickens were found killed in the hen house.

Club Calendar

MONDAY—Gyro Club luncheon, Empress Hotel, 12.15 p.m.

TUESDAY—Kiwanis Club luncheon, Empress Hotel, noon; Victoria North Kiwanis Club dinner, Monterey, 6.15 p.m.

THURSDAY—Rotary Club luncheon, Empress Hotel, 12.15 p.m.; Optimist Club luncheon, Pacific Club, 12.15 p.m.; Y's Men's Club dinner, Oak Bay Beach Hotel, 6.15 p.m.

Annual Christmas parties will be held by most of Victoria's service clubs this week.

A 12-pound turkey will be won by some lucky member of the Gyro Club. There will be a host of other prizes, and a novelty entertainment program has been arranged.

The Kiwanis Club has titled its annual Christmas party "opportunity day." The gala affair will start at noon.

Members of the Y's Men's Club will have their Christmas program at The Ranch this week. On Friday night the club will conduct another Christmas party for the Tyro group, at the Y.M.C.A., starting at 7 p.m. Sam Peat heads the club's boys' work committee.

There will be a big turkey draw and special entertainment at the Rotary Club meeting.

Carrier Vows Free Spending Not for Him

Bill Metz, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Metz, Milligrove Street, is a reformed character.

Gone for him are those days of lavish spending. Now he saves his money, except for small weekly expenses, and is salting his earnings away for the future.

Bill has been a Colonist carrier since June this year, in the Burnside area.

BILL METZ

"In the beginning," says Bill, "I didn't save my money, but I have started to now and in the last two months I have saved $40."

Thirteen-year-old, red-headed Metz, is a Grade VIII student at Tillicum Cchool. He hasn't decided what career he will choose for himself yet, but he is sure of one thing—he will continue his Colonist paper route until he graduates from school.

It would appear that the people on Bill's route will be very happy about that announcement. Mrs. D. R. Park, 224 Maddock Street, recently wrote to the paper, extending her thanks for the good service on route 206.

England Opens Second Day Of Indian Test

BOMBAY, Dec. 15 (Reuters).—England, facing a record first innings total of 485 for nine declared by India, scored 40 for the loss of one wicket on the second day of the second cricket test here today.

India's total, of which the captain, Vijay Hazare, scored 155, was their highest in any test.

It beat the 454 against the West Indies at New Delhi three years ago. Their previous best against England was 418 for six declared in the first test of the present best of five series which was drawn.

Notice of Firing Practice

Anti-aircraft firing practice will be conducted from the vicinity of ALBERT HEAD as follows:

18 DEC. '51—1000 hrs. to 1200 hrs.

Furgol Leads, Also Shares Pair Laurels

HAVANA, Dec. 15 (AP).—Marty Furgol took the lead today at the end of the 54 holes of play in Havana's 72-hole Invitation golf tournament with a card of 203.

Besides heading the list of 28 top United States golfers, Furgol today won the pro-amateur 54-hole competition. He paired with amateur, Enrique Mendoza, for the $1,200 first prize with 187.

Finishing three strokes behind Furgol and tying for second place with 206 each were Jim Turnesa, last year's winner; Pete Cooper, Claude Harmon, John Barnum, Tony Penna, and Jimmy Demaret.

Jimmy Clark and Clayton Heafner tied with 220.

The final round of 18 holes will be played tomorrow.

• LEGAL SERVICE •

SUBJECT:

Law and Lawyers

Law changes with the times. In British countries law adapts itself to social and economic development, progress and the needs of the people.

A lawyer must know the law or how to find it. He must also be alert and sensitive to changing events, and be ready and courageous enough to challenge existing law and advocate what is right and just in the light of existing conditions.

Toronto Stocks Advance; Other Markets Weaken

By C.P. and A.P.

The New York stock market Saturday was irregularly lower.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks lost 10 cents at $97.80 with the industrial component off 20 cents, rails off 20 cents, and utilities up 10 cents.

Volume was 420,000 shares.

For the week the average lost 80 cents.

dollar came too late to affect the market.

The Canadian action was welcomed in Wall Street. Now Canadians can trade in American securities just as freely as Americans can.

Toronto stock prices advanced slightly in quiet trading.

Industrials weak at the opening following Friday's decline—steadily rallied support to post relatively few losses.

A group of penny golds and western oils displayed moderately large turnovers. Volume for the session was about 700,000 shares.

Base metals were mixed and western oils lower.

Senior golds showed little trend. Penny golds displayed a wide list of gains.

Montreal stock prices were steady to a trifle easier at mid-session.

Utilities, senior metals, senior oils and miscellaneous industrials fell off.

Carriers and banks were mixed. Beverages held steady, while papers moved irregularly higher.

Mines and Western oils were irregularly lower in extremely dull trading.

Industrial volume was 18,700 shares traded and mines had a turnover of 39,600 shares.

Prices of coarse grains futures closed higher on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange although early extreme advances were erased in the late trade as offerings increased.

Abolition of foreign exchange control appeared to have only a minor effect on trade. Prices followed Chicago trends.

Prices for class two and I.W.A. wheat were down ¼ cent from Friday.

Discord Noted Despite Signs Of Busy-ness

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP).—A quick glance at business and industry in the United States showed busy factories and crowded stores this week.

Reports of good business popped up all over the lot. But there were discordant notes here and there. A steel strike appeared possible. Further consumer goods cuts seemed certain.

The defense industries were on their usual high production schedules. Country-wide, the dollar volume of retail trade was a little above a year ago when buying was at a record level.

It didn't take much poking around under the surface, however, to turn up disappointments and soft spots.

Mild weather in many sections of the country slowed Christmas shopping in affected areas. Reduced price promotions were reported more common than in recent years.

Customers were described as choosy. If they couldn't get the quality they wanted at the price they liked they just didn't buy.

Dun and Bradstreet, the business reporting service, said retail dollar volume was modestly higher than the previous week or a year ago.

Interest in apparel was smaller than usual at this time of year, Dun and Bradstreet said, with the most popular items such things as scarves, hosiery, footwear and haberdashery items suitable for Christmas gifts.

Walkie-Talkie Joins In Forest Operations

VANCOUVER, Dec. 15.—The walkie-talkie, one of the Second World War's major contributions to the field of communications, has found a place in British Columbia's forest industry.

Crews of fallers and buckers working deep in the timber on Columbia Cellulose Company Limited operations at Terrace and Khutzehmateen are now equipped with the portable sets and in case of emergency can be in immediate communication with the main camp. This new equipment will be of great value in expediting the arrival of assistance in case of accident, and also in the event of a breakdown of power saw equipment.

Ten of the portable sets, each with a power of two watts, are now in use at the operations.

In addition the company has two 50 watt base stations, one at Terrace and the other at Khutzeymateen, and eight mobile stations mounted in cars and trucks.

The complete radio communication system has assisted materially in expediting the transmission of orders from camp to woods and to individual units.

The equipment operates on a frequency of 153.05 megacycles.

Fluctuations Expected In Dollar

MONTREAL, Dec. 15 (CP).—The American dollar was quoted here today at 2¼ to 27/32 per cent premium but banking sources said there may be wide fluctuations early next week with resumption of foreign exchange trading Monday in New York and London. The markets there are closed Saturdays.

Today's quotation on the American dollar here was slightly under yesterday's premium. There was no immediate appreciable effect of last night's announcement from Ottawa of Canada's abolition of foreign exchange control.

Sources here said that, pending resumption of trading in New York and London, banks here were merely dealing among themselves at today's quotations.

U.S. Relaxes Rubber Curbs

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15 (AP).—The United States government has formally announced a relaxation of rubber controls after Jan. 1.

The national production authority issued the order yesterday after announcing Dec. 3 that rubber stocks had increased to the point where it was possible to remove virtually all restrictions on use of new rubber.

Under the new order, limitations on production of tires and other rubber goods are abolished except for certain continuing restrictions on the use of natural rubber and other rubber products.

The white sidewall type of tire will continue under control.

One regulation will reduce the percentages of natural rubber which can be used in tires for small passenger cars. The change will be from 15 to 14 percent.

Finns Pass Law To Fight Inflation

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 15 (Reuters).—The Finnish parliament today passed an emergency powers law, giving the government wide powers to curb inflation. The law authorizes the government among other things to peg wages to the cost-of-living index and to control and tax some exports.

Britain to Make Loan Payment in Full, Removes Some Restrictions on Pound

LONDON, Dec. 16 (Sunday) (AP).—Hard-up Britain announced Saturday she will pay both interest and capital instalments totaling $176,000,000, due December 31 on her post-war loans from Canada and the United States. She could have claimed a waiver on the interest.

Prime Minister Churchill's government also gave the British pound sterling a small measure of freedom to demonstrate its real value in foreign money markets. Subject to some continuing limitations, the Bank of England authorized private individuals to trade British pounds for foreign money for the first time in 12 years.

Both moves clearly were intended to restore world confidence in Britain's wobbly economy and weakened currency and to bolster the British case for more military and economic help from the United States.

A highly-placed informant said the government will have to sell gold from the sterling area's British-banked waning gold and dollar reserves to pay the United States and Canada.

HELP ASKED

However, Britain has asked for $600,000,000 in economic help alone from the U.S. Mutual Security Agency for the next six months and the United States expects to be able to hand over perhaps half of that.

A British treasury announcement said:

"Under the relevant agreements, His Majesty's government have the right on certain conditions to request the waiver of the interest element of these payments, but after a careful review of all the circumstances they decided not to make such a request. The payments will therefore be made in full on the 31st of December next."

The interest accounts for $110,700,000 of the total. The instalments are the first of 50 which Britain is due to pay yearly.

The United States will get $51,500,000 on principal and $87,000,000 in interest; Canada will get $14,000,000 on principal and $23,700,000 in interest.

WAR SHOCKS

$4,350,000,000 and Canada $1,185,000,000 for Britain in 1946 when she was reeling under economic shocks from the Second World War.

Churchill plumped for the repayment Dec. 31 in spite of a continuous British economic crisis.

A British government informant said "This is intended to show beyond a doubt that, despite all our troubles, we are trying to make every effort to meet our obligations," he said. "It is quite wrong to take this move as a signal that things are any better for Britain."

The move to relax currency exchange regulations followed rumors that the pound would be revalued or set free to find its own level. The government did neither of these things.

The sum total of the change is that permitted currency transactions will take place through the private money market rather than through the Bank of England, a nationalized institution. Some risks in supporting the pound are switched from the bank to private traders.

A Bank of England spokesman stressed the changes are more "symbolic than fundamental."

The present official exchange rate of $2.80 in U.S. funds to the pound is unchanged. But British and foreign dealers can dicker among themselves and arrive at their own agreements within fixed limits on, for example, how many dollars it should take to buy a pound.

A dealer buying or selling foreign money for immediate use to meet a current debt, perhaps will be able to swing the cost of the pound one per cent from the official value, or between about $2.77 and $2.83, getting the best deal he can.

A dealer in the futures market, buying currency for later use will be able to vary the price still more. For instance, a New York merchant may wish to contract with a British manufacturer for goods to be made here and delivered next year. He may be able, if he is a good bargainer, to buy his pounds for less than $2.77.

The only restriction would be that dealers must not get the price so low that the international monetary fund would regard it as unreasonable. No one here would speculate today on what price the fund regards as too far out of line.

Next game today: Legion at Victoria City Lower Beacon Hill 7:30 p.m.

Victoria West saved a scoring punch until the second half and went on to edge Native Sons 2-1 in a Victoria and District Senior Hockey League game at Lower Beacon Hill Arena last night.

West's victory was their third straight and boosted them into a first place tie with Legion and Esquimalt.

Despite West's unfortunate record, the Cougars put on a fine display of hockey but poor shooting prevented them from scoring more than one goal.

Esquimalt was full value for their win over Hearneys as they dominated play throughout the game. Hearneys' only goal came in the second period.

Chief of Ceremonies opened the scoring for Esquimalt when he passed to George L. Hall who converted the play. Hearneys tied the game at 1-1 when Wilson scored on a pass from Wilson.

Esquimalt were awarded a penalty shot in the second half but Hearneys' goalie Ron Robertson averted a shutout for Hearneys when he stopped the shot.

Hearneys' Don Pedersen headed the list of offenders with three minor penalties.

Esquimalt will play Victoria West at Lower Beacon Hill Arena on Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m.

The fact was released yesterday by George Wetherall manager of the team since its return in 1949. Wetherall stated that he and six players including goaltender Claude [illegible] would send in their notice next week.

He would not definitely state what caused the parting but mentioned that certain members of the team were telling him what players he was to put and that he was having trouble [illegible] the players he was [illegible] for the Lower Island [illegible].

Leaving the team along with Wetherall were [illegible] Ford Mercer, Al Dyal, George Parsons, Teatro Macdonald and Claude Pro[illegible].

Golf--- Here's How

By SAM SNEAD
Golf's Greatest Player Teacher

A good player swings [illegible] back rather lower than and up. It makes a great difference whether you sweep the club or lift it. It [illegible] a player who lifts up at the top at first that will not be good swing. For [illegible] who merely lifts his club does not get this muscular windup, this coiled spring type of body action that is indispensable to a good golf swing. The player who lifts his club or rushes his back swing gets his club in the position for the downswing before his hip and shoulder pivot and weight-shift to the right leg have been completed. As a result the starts swinging down before his body "wind-up" is complete. That means there is no coordination little control and lack of power because two forces that should contribute to the swing are opposing each other.

Wetherall To Appeal Life Ban

"We are appealing our case to the B.C. Football Commissioner," George Wetherall stated yesterday.

Wetherall was referring to the Lower Island Junior and Juvenile Football Association ruling which has banished his father, Herb Wetherall, Sr. for life and his brother, Herb Wetherall, Jr. for the remainder of the season.

The suspensions were handed out by the association following a rumpus during a league match against Hearneys last Sunday.

Wetherall felt that the commission would intervene in their behalf.

He deemed the suspensions "undue" and pointed out that a pair of Coast League players got far less for "worse" actions this season.

Buxton, Stockton Gain Right to Cup Campaign

LONDON, Dec. 15 (Reuters)—

Buxton and Stockton, two Third Division clubs outside Britain's Football League today fought their way into the third round of the English Association Cup, the most coveted award in British soccer.

Both teams won replays on the Monday after the third round ended in the 11th game of the season for the Buxton club.

Buxton fought all the way to score a 4-3 home victory against Accrington, a Lancashire club in the Second Division, while Stockton, opposed to the first round to visiting Aldershot, registered a 2-0 victory on Stockton home.

Buxton, which has never reached the second round before, will have a chance to meet the gamblers if they win their replays.

In second spot in League Division One today was the 2-1 defeat at home of Portsmouth, leader of the division, by Liverpool, fourth in the division.

CLOSE CALL

Portsmouth narrowly avoided being dislodged from the top of the division as Arsenal and Manchester United were upset yesterday and now are tied for points, one point behind the leaders.

Tottenham Hotspur, Third Division (South) leaders, overpowered Aldershot, Bournemouth swamped Gillingham, Brighton and Hove Albion defeated Walsall and Southampton beat Newport (Isle of Wight) in other games on the Second Division card of 27 games.

Arsenal, Manchester United, Burnley and Blackpool, all defeated Wednesday, were idle today.

Comeback in Bean Town DiMaggio's Best Thrill

(Of all his many baseball thrills, Joe DiMaggio picks one night in Boston—just two years ago—as the greatest of all. Each year, with International News Service, which the now retired DiMag calls the greatest thrill of my baseball life.)

By CHARLES EINSTEIN

NEW YORK, Dec. 15 (INS)—

On the night of June 27, 1949, Joe DiMaggio—out of action because of a heel injury for the second time—got back into the swing of things.

He played a few more innings in centre field for the New York Yankees and the New York Giants. He came to bat five times and didn't get a hit. And it was the greatest thrill of his baseball life.

Joe stepped out of retirement to help the Yankees win the pennant and the world championship. Pitchers and infielders emerged from hitless games on the Second Baseman was 37 years old and in the eighth year of his baseball career.

Joe DiMaggio had been out of the lineup since May 13. He had injured his heel in the first game of the season.

So the next night, June 28, he was in centre field for the Yankees as they opened a vital three-game series against the pennant-favored Boston Red Sox before a jammed capacity crowd in Fenway Park.

MIXED RECEPTION

As he stood at the Yankee plate in the first inning, the crowd gave him a mixed welcome—cheers and catcalls. Then as he stepped to the plate

Pitcher Mickey McDermott of the Red Sox, after deliberately walking Yankee batters, threw three pitches. Joe DiMaggio's wrists snapped and the ball came [illegible] for a single to left field.

The next two Yankees were out, but then Tommy Henrich and Hank Bauer powered a three-run homer to put New York out in front, 3 to 0.

There was one on base when DiMag came up again in the third inning. McDermott delivered, Joe swung and the ball whammed its way into the left field retaining screen for a home run.

SPARKED RALLY

The Yanks led 5 to 0. They won the game 5 to 4. DiMaggio had started the first rally and [illegible] the second.

The next day, Joe DiMaggio hit two home runs and the Yanks won again.

Exactly after that DiMaggio hit another homer and the Yanks won again sweeping the series.

This was did Joe DiMaggio start the 1949 season.

In the three games he had four hits, two runs and a single and batted in three runs.

DiMag started from there on as the Yankees and Red Sox battled down to the wire. The Red Sox held a game with twenty points behind Joe to the Yanks and the Yanks won by [illegible]

Wages to Increase Rates in Hospitals

High wages paid to hospital employees will boost daily rates charge by hospitals next year, according to BCHIS officials.

Yesterday was the deadline for hospital boards in B.C. to submit budgets for 1952 to the Hospital Insurance Service.

After budgets have been adjusted to establish an over-all budget for each hospital total sources of income other than hospital patient rates are calculated.

The remainder is then broken down to establish the per diem rate to be charged hospital patients next year.

Hospital officials say the main reason for increased budgets in most cases will be the higher wages being paid to employees.

Hospital insurance pays 90 per cent of ward rates for the care and this gives the daily rate. BCHIS pays about 90 per cent of ward rates.

The hospital service fees a person incurs next year will be $5 a month. Wages make up two-thirds of hospital operation costs.

Hospital officials say the main reason for increased budgets in most cases will be the higher wages being paid to employees.

In 1900 the family moved to Victoria, [illegible] parents [illegible] family, Swannecked Cottage.

Miss Bagshaw attended Girls Central school and All Hallows College. Later she spent a number of years in California studying singing and dramatics.

In 1945 she opened a studio in Victoria and began teaching voice production, speaking and dramatic art.

"Each human woman should be conscious of her voice and what it says to her for her success in conversation.

"Many people suffer because they cannot speak in a room full of people, can't think of anything to say, can't ...

"I often find a ... advice from the late President Roosevelt to a frightened young girl at a party one night. 'All you've got to make the grade,' he said, 'is to make the other fellow feel at ease, then the rest is plain sailing.'

VOICE IS SHOW WINDOW

Doris Bagshaw says voice is the greatest of all aids to express the speaking voice and would like to see a better speech week observed across the Dominion.

"Not everyone has a beautiful voice, but everyone can improve it. Don't forget, after all, the voice is one's show window."

Does not suppose that Miss Bagshaw has enjoyed complete success in her chosen field. She has had her disappointments and experiences, but she is a member of the Canadian Actors' Equity Association, a good cook and an expert dressmaker.

One of her chief hobbies is sketching pen and ink drawings of old Victoria landmarks.

Plenty of Christmas Treats In Britain, But at High Cost

By MURIEL NARRAWAY

LONDON, Dec. 15 (CP) — Britons [illegible] may be bandying words on a proposed "austerity" Christmas [illegible] rationed food but there is no shortage in the special delicacies that are [illegible] on most festive tables.

A walk through any of the big department food stores sets housewives [illegible] how many goodies their bank balances can [illegible]

For the only restrictions on non-rationed goods are the prices.

As yet the threatened cut in canned food supplies has not touched the counter and decorative displays include tins of cooked ham weighing anything from around 10 pounds to as little as six ounces and a choice of cooked meat, cooked chicken cooked and prepared.

There are cooked turkeys, whole or sliced chicken and pâtés of all varieties, sausages, frankfurters, chicken croquettes, patés and a wide variety of fish, cooked, from cod and [illegible] both salted and fresh.

The price of these goods may be somewhat higher than that of the meat for the cost of which is controlled by government subsidy, but most housewives spend their extra pound on Christmas fare and supplies of non-rationed goods are large and assorted.

EASILY HANDLED

Best selling point about the canned varieties is the ease with which they can be handled in [illegible] chens and rooms with inadequate [illegible]

Mothers Need Recreation

TORONTO, Dec. 15 (CP).—Mothers, harried by incessant demands of bringing up a family, need to get away from the home atmosphere even if only for three or four hours a week.

Dr. Margaret McCready, principal of home economics, Macdonald Institute, Guelph, Ont., yesterday told a round-table group of 40 women's [illegible] should be a supply of [illegible] for babies to [illegible] the home [illegible], while the mother escapes. Women would [illegible] to their potential heights until they were relieved of some of the burdens of home-making.

Prof. W. H. Drummond of Guelph said that women do a good job of spending the family income but consumer information is badly needed.

One-Millionth Traffic Death Expected Soon

CHICAGO Dec 15 (INS) — Someone in the United States who scorned safety precautions today [illegible] would become the one-millionth traffic death since records were first kept in 1913.

Probably within a week the grim, statistical milestone will be reached. The National safety council estimates that the grim figure will be reached next Saturday.

Once [illegible] would die [illegible] per hour on the average.

The tools to stop traffic carnage already are at hand. The simplest is the most effective. Its slogan is "don't be one of a million." The purpose of the campaign is to impress the seriousness of the traffic menace upon [illegible] of the country, so that [illegible] will realize that [illegible] is now in store.

The [illegible] traffic [illegible] has risen [illegible] per cent. [illegible] per cent. The [illegible] average of one fatal [illegible] 100 deaths per day.

German Industry, Labor Lock Horns

BONN, Dec. 15 (AP)—Get many's industrial barons and the powerful labor unions are girding for a fierce fight over the "co-determination" of the Ruhr Valley.

Labor is demanding for workers an equal voice in the management of key industries.

"Co-determination" and nationalization are inseparable.

Workers in the coal, steel and iron industries in the Ruhr already have won an equal voice with management in running the plants.

Labor calls this "co-determination" which means the end of private enterprise.

Management in parts of the Ruhr fears that if labor gets control of the industries the Ruhr may be turned by labor to

KEENLY INTERESTED

Be a revelation, many people who German labor's power in other countries will be keenly interested in the Labor leaders in the European countries are keenly interested in this experiment.

Now the West German trade union federation wants changes in the federal constitution to provide a legal framework for the co-determination system throughout the economy.

The federation's executive board has announced that it intends as its first target the Ruhr coal industry, followed by iron and steel production.

Political observers see little chance that German cabinet will head off extension of labor's power after labor's tremendous victory in the coal and steel industries.

When the measure came before parliament last April the country's biggest and bitterest political rivals the Christian Democrats and the Socialists united temporarily to support it.

Labor leaders make plain that they consider co-determination more important than higher

Automobiles New Industry For Israel

HAIFA, Dec. 15 (ANA Kommerz)—The first American car assembled in Israel, has just left for United Hoofnels motor-racing off the assembly line at a brand-new plant here are due for export to customers in a dozen countries.

This joint achievement of American and Israeli enterprises has added a new label to the world's motorcar trade: Made In Israel."

At present the cars are not a complete product of Israel's industry. Nearly all the components come from the parent company in the United States in crates, to be assembled in Israel, but within a year about half of all the components will be made in Israel.

Three cars are assembled daily and five trucks but this output is rising steadily. As in Britain, most cars are for export only, to obtain foreign exchange for essential foodstuffs and raw materials.

They are in every way equal to their American-made counterparts. Some buyers even prefer the Israeli product, claiming that it shows superior workmanship.

Indo-China Reds Get More Aid

PARIS, Dec. 15 (AP)—The Chinese Communists are stepping up their aid to the anti-French Nationalists in Indo-China, the French cabinet was told today. Jean Letourneau, minister in charge of relations with the associated states told the cabinet that the Communist-led Vietminh rebels are getting more and better quality arms aid from Red China.

Here is aerial view of newly-completed section of Casablanca's "new city," known as Ain Chock, which is part of the ambitious housing project now underway, with 200,000 new housing units scheduled for construction before 1960. Morocco's urban population has risen from 552,000 in 1921 to 1,897,000 at the last count in 1947. The project is financed by French funds supplemented by aid and modern machinery from and by the Marshall Plan. Even the lowest paid Moroccan can afford one of the new homes, with rent for each family running at 830 francs a month—about $2.35.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Famous Play Showing at Langham Court

Theatre Guild Gives Demonstration Of Why "The Heiress" Won Prizes

It was a terrible night to go out on a play last night but the Theatre Guild presentation of "The Heiress" was worth every raindrop.

Everyone on this Guild crowd is an actor. They take on parts - winning and academy award parts will pass with flying colors to the tossers.

Marjorie E. Peck and Augustus Goetz from the novel Washington Square by Henry James, the play ran successfully in New York and London and was later made into an academy award winning picture starring Olivia De Havilland.

Last night's local job was no second rate imitation of either.

MONEY'S WORTH

The word "amateur" linked with any kind of stage performance often has an unsavory meaning. When we say "strictly amateur" we mean poor entertainment.

This idea is probably based on the modern dollar philosophy that you can't get anything good cheap. If a play are to be fair fair then the "must" necessarily be $1,000 a week material.

This group of "amateurs" however, turn up a polish for the ages worth. Every single one of the actors looking and the Langham Court Theatre could safely charge admission but for nothing.

REAL ACTOR

They have part because they like it and they do a wonderful job.

Bruce Banyard for example is an actor. As Dr. Austin Sloper a mid-19th century New York doctor of means, Mr. Banyard was excellent. His arrogance and mid Victorian domination of a weak daughter was very real stuff.

In the title role, veteran Theatre Guild actress Noel Cusack carried a big load on her small shoulders but she strengthened with every scene.

CHARACTER CHANGE

The part of Catherine Sloper involves a complete change of character from shyness and lack of poise to cruel bitterness. Miss Cusak achieved this with stark ingenuity.

As Lavinia Penniman, Dr. Sloper's sister, Olive Keane upheld her reputation as a clever supporting actress.

Archie Bain was Morris Townsend the charming fortune hunter and he had me believing for a while that his intentions were honorable.

Kathleen Baker as Marian Countess Thompson as Elizabeth Armond Ports Bailey as Arthur Townsend Jessamine Keane as Marian Almond and Helen Smith as Mrs. Montgomery had smaller parts but each was thorough and highly competent.

DRAMA FESTIVAL

Finally we have to say that the Regional Drama Festival is a little premature. There seems to be no reason why it should not be right at the top.

An able job of directing was done by Audrey St. Denis-Jones.

Two Boards Will Honor "Old Boys"

Two war memorial boards to the old boys of University School and Brentwood College will be unveiled at University School on Wednesday at 11 a.m.

Col. C. C. I. Merritt, V.C., an old boy of University School and Surgeon Lieut.-Cmdr. M. D. Young, R.C.N. (R.), formerly of Brentwood College will perform the unveiling ceremonies.

More than $12,000 has been donated by former students of both schools towards building a recreation room and assembly hall where the memorials will be placed. The fund still lacks $8,000 for completion of a stage and dressing rooms.

Old boys of both schools will be welcomed at the ceremony.

Striking Christmas Mural Decorates Mantel

Mrs. Peggy Walton Packard, well-known local painter and sculptor, has chosen this striking way to decorate her studio-home "The Barn" for Christmas. Mrs. Packard doesn't believe in artists copying other work, but an old English Christmas card she found so appealed to her that she copied it with her own impressions, onto the wall over her mantelpiece. The three-by-seven foot mural depicts a traditional English yuletide scene of merrymakers gathered around a groaning festive board, and carrying in the boar's head. THE LITTLE STEAM ENGINE

"What do you want for Christmas," Freddie said to me as we went for a walk out here by the sea. The ocean was calm & gull did cry. "some socks maybe ... or I guess a tie. For Heaven Sakes!" her voice a slight sneer, "THAT'S what I get you every year. There MUST be something, pet! ties & socks & you always guess a tie in a box. For the corner store we steered our way & she babbled a lot about Christmas dad. Overhead the stars were strewn & away off there a big round moon. In my parcel jacked I felt warm and snug, for a window with toys she gave me a hug. A tiny Christmas tree of those silver whites was all decked out in bubbly lights. And spread beneath for girls & boys were some carefully chosen new & old toys. Oh LOOK, she sed "at that lovely doll," which was sitting on top of a small football. "And see over there that little brown pony. I was gonna ask Santa for a doll with a [illegible]. But Mummie didn't think like Santa she's droll, was making them yet up there at the Pole. Would cost him too much, she also sed, so I'll ask him for someth-ng else instead. Why are you STARING like that?" she sed to me. "It's that little steam engine by the branch of the tree." "Well, what's it FOR, what does it DO, tell me Pop, 'cause I haven't a clue." "Well - see the brass boiler & the piston across." "Humph" she sed, "it's a bottle of sauce. Like 'Lea & Perrins,' the very large size." I stood there, & glued my eyes.

I was 8 years old, I continued to stare, the engine I'd got ... exactly as there. I not only SAW it but HEARD it, too & the whistle on top when the governor blew. "I wish" she sed sorta off the cuff, "they had some prices on this stuff." "Our stuff is priced, as low as we're able, so c'mon in for a coffee table, or [illegible] are the "Duncan Phyfe" there's NOTHING that would so please the wife). We walked to the Druggist, bot ink & a pen but she never asked, WHAT I wanted again. Before we got home, she remarked she was "low," & did I think I could spare some more dough? In her eyes the moon cast a gleam, she raced thru the door, she seemed full of steam. A few days later I guanced in that store, but gone was my engine from the snow on the floor. I felt a little sad, as I thot of that toy, but then I was happy for some little boy, who would get the same thrill when he got outa bed, the same as I did, when FULL STEAM AHEAD.

Operation Christmas Tree Today Last Scheme of Year for Scots

MILITARY ACTIVITIES

By TREVOR COLLINS

The Canadian Scottish Regiment leaves the Bay Street Armory this morning on its last outdoor scheme of the year.

Headed by Capt. Vernon Bigwood a number of men from the unit will deploy in the Sooke area on "Operation Christmas Tree."

It's a peaceful mission and [illegible] "H" Company of the Canadian Scottish Regiment in Europe will reap the harvest from the efforts of the men in the operation.

Christmas trees will be distributed to these families by army transport if they are required.

Removing trees and other decorations will be used at the armory for the various children's parties which are slated to be held this week.

YULE SOCIAL

Cadets of the 75th Heavy A.A. Regiment will hold a Christmas social evening and dance at the armory on Saturday, Dec. 22 at 7 p.m.

Cadets have been invited to bring friends and relatives to the affair, according to Capt. L. J. Jesson. Dress will be uniform.

Annual Christmas smoker of the 75th Heavy A.A. Regiment will be held on Friday, Dec. 21 at the armory. The regiment will stand down on Jan. 6.

NEW PUBLICATION

A new monthly publication "The Island Gunner," edited by Major R. V. Parrett and Sgt. J. L. Weeks of No. 8 A.A.O.R., is now coming off the press and will be distributed to various artillery units "the length of Canada."

It contains special items of interest to artillerymen and other current army news.

Sgt. C. B. Williamson, formerly of the A. & T. staff of the unit is home for Christmas from the R.C.E.M.E. school at Kingston, Ont., where he is an instructor.

During his stay with the local reserve unit he was active in organizing the women's division.

It has now ceased to be active as soon as the army gets around to giving authorization to sign the women on and supply unit lines.

The senior N.C.O.'s course now under way under the direction of No. 8 A.A.O.R. is receiving a good attendance according to instructors Sgt. J. A. Gordon, Sgt. B. Spatrow, Sgt. Gordon Bulmer and Gnr. M. Shavan.

ANNUAL MEET

Annual general meeting of the Air Force Officers' Association will be held at the Pacific Club on Wednesday at 8:15 p.m., president E. A. A. Boulden announced.

An election of officers for 1952 will be held.

MAN MANAGEMENT

The thoroughness of military training for female members of the army is demonstrated in a recent army training directive for personnel of the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

Subjects listed for study by candidates of proud and serene N.C.O. courses include several periods of instruction on "Man Management."

HOLIDAYS

The Canadian Scottish Regiment Princess Mary's will stand down on Monday for two weeks during the holiday season, Lieut.-Col. W. J. Musselle announced yesterday. Messes, however, will remain open.

NEW GUN

The "Canadian Gunner," a publication of the Royal Canadian School of Artillery, Shilo, Man., describes training with a new weapon, the 105-mm. field artillery gun.

This is an American weapon and the first of its kind to be used by the Canadian army. Training at Shilo is being conducted with this gun in line with the Canadian policy of using American arms.

OFFICER TRAINING

Two members of No. 8 A.A.O.R., Bdr. R. C. Hall and Gnr. C. P. Sinnett, are successful candidates for officer training.

They are to be appointed to Western Command Officers' Training Corps and will take a six-month course at Work Point Barracks.

The successful completion of this course will qualify the men for the rank of lieutenant.

BACK FROM TOUR

Major R. V. Parrett commanding officer of No. 8 A.A.O.R., Lieut. Larry L. as quartermaster and Sgt. John L. Weeks, administrative staff, returned recently from Vancouver where they conducted a six-day tour through the area ordnance depot and R.C.E.M.E. workshop.

The tour was arranged by army headquarters to acquaint members of the unit on the various phases of supplies and services.

How to Lace a Packboard

PACKBOARDS are the most satisfactory equipment now for backpacking, but are very uncomfortable if the cover is improperly laced. The diagonal 'X' lacing shown in Figure 1 is the wrong way to lace a packboard cover for several reasons. The 'X' lacing allows the rising rope to tighten over one portion of the cover and give slack to some other section. Therefore, where the main weight is taken the cover becomes slack. Also, the diagonal pull of the lacing puts many creases in the canvas and the tighter you draw the rope, the more creases you make.

NO WRINKLES

A packboard cover laced with the proper locked 'H' type lacing will not wrinkle and the strain does not draw slack from some other portion, because each section of lacing forms a friction lock in the rope. There is another advantage to using this method and that is the cover can be made several times tighter than with any other lacing. The proper locked 'H' lacing is shown in Figure 2.

To lace a cover with the locked "H," tie your lacing rope securely around the top cross member of the packboard frame. Then pass the rope through the first left-hand top eyelet and across to the top right-hand eyelet, then back to the left eyelet and under one of the turns taken around the packboard cross member. When this has been drawn together tightly, the actual lashing begins.

Now pass the rope through the second right-hand eyelet across to the second left-hand eyelet, then back over the rope just where it passes through the second right-hand eyelet. Draw tightly, swing the rope then strain vertically down thereby forcing the diagonal section of the cover to become vertical. This puts a considerable strain on the rope and causes you to get the lacing at the very top.

The lacing is continued in the same manner from eyelet to eyelet until the cover lacing is complete. Figure 3 shows the rope passing from the second third eyelet over the lace between the third and fourth eyelets and back and in between their lace and away to the third and fourth eyelets. The next step, Figure 4, shows the rope passing through the third and fourth eyelets after the rope has been drawn tight.

Russia's Part in Sealing

By FRANK KELLEY

Shvidtskof's zeal was not inspired by glory. He had sea-otter peltries on the brain. Instead of the island on which Bering's ship struck, he bumped into the Aleutians, resort of numerous otter herds. The same quest was behind all the Russians who followed with their trading ventures. By 1768-69 a large area of what is now Alaska had been mapped by them and was being exploited. Bancroft in his "History of Alaska," graphically describes the 30-year period, 1741-1769, of exploration and trading.

Competition was terrific, according to the record, for the fine furs Alaska and its islands produced. By 1799 more than 60 Russian trading concerns were operating when the Russian-American Company managed to effect a merger, to which the Russian Emperor Paul granted a charter for certain reasons, pecuniary and otherwise.

POLITICAL TIES

Prior to this association of traders, two Russians, Ivan Golitsof and Gregory Shelikof, had visions of controlling the fur trade and had established a "plantation" on Kadiak Island. In charge of this post and settlement they appointed, in 1790, Alexander Baranof, a position he filled at the time the Emperor Paul handed over the control of all Russian possessions in Alaska, Kamchatka, the Siberian Okotsk and Kurile districts.

From Kargasol originally, Baranof, who became the first governor moved from Kadiak to a new post of the Russian-American Company, created at Fort Archangel, the original Russian name for Sitka, which was to become the centre of the Russian occupation of Alaska until the sale of the territory.

CHURCH AND STATE

Baranof proved to be a good administrator. The charter granted his company had some strings attached, too. While the privileges seemed great enough, at the same time the obligations imposed were in the same category. A military force had to be maintained as well as a church establishment, ample provisioning for naval and garrison units had to be kept on hand, all of which had to be transported overland from Russia to the Okotsk Sea at expensive procedure.

Principal markets in those days for the fine furs of Alaska were in China, where they brought fancy prices and were in continuous demand. Stories of the old days at Sitka and how the governors lived in more or less opulent ease are part of the record. Illuminating the great trade in sea-otter skins, it is said that in 1804 Baranof made a special journey from Sitka to Okotsk with 15,000 pelts of the sea-otter, worth [illegible].

At that time the Russians were not interested in the fur-seal, probably as it must have been. There were already rookeries on the Commanderofsky Islands; but it was in quest of more and more otter haunts that the Pribilof Islands, breeding ground of millions of the sleek fur-seal, were first located in 1786.

On their hunt for the prized sea-otter, Russian explorers noted the passage of the fur-seals through the channels of the Aleutian chain, both north and south bound, paying little attention to their movements until the otter herds began to get skimmer. Only then did speculation concerning the fur-seal begin to occupy the attention of the Russian traders.

When the natives were questioned they expressed ignorance about where the seals were bound, but believed the animals repaired to some far north land every year about the same time. They had a belief, too, that when they left this far away resort they traveled south to some other strange island or continent, on the beaches of which they spent certain winter months.

SEARCH BEGINS

The Russians, in the first instance, preferred to look for the supposed winter resting place of the fur-seal herds once they became really interested, when sundry craft, from time to time, sailed into the south searching for the rumored resorts. This area of search stretched from Oregon to Japan and occasionally as far south as the Sandwich Islands.

It all chanced, however, so that it was not until 1780, after some eighteen years of searching by adventurous sailormen that the Pribilof Islands, the northern end of the annual migration, were discovered. A rugged Muscovite, Stoorman Gerassim Pribilof by name, serving with one of the multiple trading concerns, got excited over some yarns of an old Aleut Shaman of Oonalaska, in which the latter told a legend of the natives, stating that certain islands in the "Smoky Sea" to the north had long been known to the Aleuts.

FOR THREE YEARS

Pribilof, in command of the small sloop St. George, which he sailed for three successive years northward from Oonalaska as far as Bering Strait before he was successful. This long search can be appreciated by anyone familiar with the fogs and tides of Bering Sea.

Pribilof was a native of old Russia, his father having been a seaman on one of Bering's ships, the St. Peter, wrecked in 1741. His search for the islands, named after him, ended in July, 1786, when his ship raised the loom of Tolstoi Mees where he landed and took possession of the island for the Czar. St. Paul Island was sighted the next year from St. George.

SITTING ON THE FENCE

BY NATHANIAL GUBBINS

PROBABLY you didn't believe it when your Uncle Natt told you that Dr. Mossadeg is a woman disguised as the Persian prime minister.

Here, to prove the point, are extracts from American newspaper reports during Mossadeg's visit to the United States.

"Dr. Mossadeg was a flop on television. . . . Later that evening he was found weeping in his hospitable bed."

"Doctors at the hospital examined Mossadeg and found him in pretty good shape."

"Mossadeg likes America and was all smiles when he was guest of honor at a Washington lunch. He has quit weeping."

"Mossadeg has ignored the Shah's orders to return home."

"Mossadeg's observations in Washington were so obscure that officials had no idea what he was talking about."

"When asked if the door for negotiations with the British was still open, Mossadeg said he had never seen the door."

* * *

This is an obvious case of a girl who has run away from an unhappy home, where she was bullied by nasty men and has refused to return.

She thought she was going to be a star on American television, was a flop and went home to cry, as many a girl would do.

Because nobody took much notice of her she pretended to be ill but when they made a fuss of her in Washington she was all smiles.

As the poor little thing knows nothing about oil, and probably cares less, she tried to bluff it out with some meaningless remarks, hoping a kind-hearted official would say "Don't worry your pretty head about it any more. Sugar. What about lunch, huh?"

But, as her head is not very pretty, nobody said it. So what is her next move?

She stalls for time with dumb blonde answers.

"Is the door still open?"

"Door? Whatever do you mean. I ain't seen no door."

I hope they will treat her kindly when she gets home. She is a problem girl who needs a lot of patience and understanding.

RE-WRITE MAN

In a little book, "New Nursery Rhymes for Old," Geoffrey Hall has taken the terror and cruelty out of baby's literature by changing Three Blind Mice into Three Kind Mice, giving Mother Hubbard's dog a bone and keeping pussy out of the well with a saucer of [illegible].

But it occurred to Mr. Hall, that if it is his intention to purge original sin from future generations his job of rewriting has only just begun.

When the purified tots have grown too old to appreciate Mr. Hall's present work he will have to be pretty smart to tackling the Wild Westerns before the eight year olds get at them.

Dead Eye Dick, the curly-haired English cowboy, must have his dialogue changed when, at last, he traps bad man Pete in Red Gulch.

Hands above your head, Pete, there's a good chap. I have you covered!

So you'd shoot me down like a dawg?

I never shoot dogs because it's cruel and slay.

Yeah?

What's more, I couldn't shoot you, either. These are only water pistols.

Water pistols? Heck. Well mine ain't water pistols. Ain't you scared I'll plug you?

Not at all, Pete. At heart you are a good man, more sinned against than sinning. Give me your guns.

Dead Eye, you shore are the whitest man I know.

No better than others, Pete. Only more fortunate. Now I will take you home to your old mother, who waits for you with tears in her eyes and a hot supper of ham, eggs, and cornbread.

Lead me to it . . . her, I mean.

SUPPER DANCE

People in London who think it smart to go to night club bottle parties "where there is American square dancing, 'Swing Your Honey' and 'Ladies' Chain,' will feel rather silly when they hear that Lottie, the Devil Cat, and her friends have been doing this sort of thing for some time on the flat roof above the dining room of The Sea Nest.

One moonlit night, when the scampering of little feet across the roof was intolerable, I looked out of the window of the top-back room and saw what was evidently an exciting moment in "Swing Your Honey."

Lottie was the honey. As she ran across the roof, a friend would chase her, throw her on her back and swing her to a following friend who, in turn, would swing her to another galloping behind.

In the next dance her friends formed a circle round her, and as each one approached she slapped them down. This must have been "Ladies' Chain."

It was then that I remembered how she had howled for food that night immediately after a herring supper, how I had gone out and begged the proprietor of a local hotel for scraps, how he had cooked her a sole on the spot and how she had pestered a neighbor that morning for rabbit.

Later I found in the garden the remains of a supper so lavish—several gnawed rabbits' legs, chicken bones, cods' heads, and the skeleton of the sole—that each cat must have made a contribution.

Lottie and her friends may not be able to bring bottles to their parties, but they bring better food than you would get at many London night clubs.

Control of Soil Erosion Problem for Land Owner

THE answer to the question "Can We Control Soil Erosion" is definitely in the affirmative, states A. E. Palmer, superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Station, Lethbridge, Alberta, who has been studying and working with soil erosion controls since 1918. He states that the control of erosion resolves itself into proper land use and cultural practices. If land is used only for purposes to which it is adapted and if cultural practices are followed that tend to prevent, rather than aggravate erosion, little soil loss is experienced. Stated in a negative way, erosion almost invariably is the result of using lands for purposes for which they are not adapted or practising improper cultural methods.

WIND EROSION

Wind erosion has been a serious problem on the prairies and most of this difficulty can be attributed to improper summer-fallowing, or to farming lands that should never have been cultivated. Many light soils in the dry areas of the prairies are adapted only to grazing and should be left in grass. Other light lands may be farmed but it is not safe to conduct summer-fallows on them. Some can be safely used for grain growing and summer-fallowing practised if the lands are farmed in strips and care is taken to keep good trash covers on the surface. Where rainfall is sufficient to ensure good growth, larger fields can be fallowed safely if the plant residue is left on the surface by tilling with blade cultivators or other implements that leave the plant residue on the surface. Where rainfall is sufficient to permit growing fall cover crops on fallows, this practise protects the soil against both wind and water erosion as effectively as the protection furnished by a good trash cover.

WATER EROSION

Water erosion is taking its toll in all parts of the country and almost invariably this is due to improper land use or faulty cultural practise. Many fields are being cultivated that are too steep for the purpose. Lands that are so steep that gullying and sheet erosion cannot be prevented by practical cultural methods should not be considered as tillable but should be used for grass, wood lots or wild life purposes. There are numerous examples of fields that are being destroyed because they are too steep for satisfactory tillage or the cropping and cultural practises used are not adapted to the specific fields. Also there are numerous examples of similar fields where contour farming, or growing grass, grassing waterways, permitting wood lots to continue on rough areas, or proper tillage, has resulted in pratically complete control of water erosion.

Anyone who has seen the wonderful results of the water erosion program developed under the leadership of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, such as that in use in the La Crosse area of Wisconsin, realizes that a proper land use program can be developed in a real problem area. Many similar conditions can be seen on farms across Canada. The Dominion Experimental Station at Lethbridge, Alberta, has two substations where steep lands are under almost complete erosion control by following simple practises of contour stripping and tillage, grassing of waterways and hillsides, preserving trash covers, and sowing fall cover crops where feasible.

PROPER LAND USE

In every case the problem of soil erosion finally resolves itself into developing a proper use of the land and satisfactory cultural practise. If anyone is having serious trouble with erosion, the cure almost invariably is to change the use of their land or method of cultivation. The experience of those who have been studying soil erosion, usually has been that the changes required are generally profitable in actual cash returns and the corrective measures often surprisingly simple and easy to apply.

Tulip That Grows Own Bouquet

By DEAN HALLIDAY

THERE is a member of the tulip family that grows a bouquet of flowers—4 to 6—on one stem. If you have not already tried these bunch-flowering tulips you will find them a most interesting lot.

Instead of producing a single stem with one bloom on top, the multi-flowered tulips all grow a strong main stem with from three to six branches half way up the stem, each side shoot or branch carrying its own flower. The result is that three to six flowers are obtained from one bulb on one main stem, as shown in the accompanying garden-graph. Each plant is a real showpiece. Plant the bulbs now and bouquets of blooms will appear early in the spring, immediately after the crocuses.

Remember that tulips grow best in sunny locations, but will do well in light or partial shade. They prefer a light friable soil and are very fussy about it being well-drained.

In large gardens, tulips are frequently planted in formal beds but in the average size garden they are best planted in groups of six or 12 or in drifts among the perennials or shrubbery border.

Individual holes for the bulbs can be dug with a hand trowel. Put a small handful of sand in the bottom of the hole, as illustrated, and set the bulb firmly upon it. This prevents air pockets beneath the bulb and assists drainage.

Tulips need winter protection because they do not have time to make enough root growth to anchor them firmly in the soil against alternate freezing and thawing. They should be covered with a straw mulch after the ground has frozen.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM NOTES

About Onions, Apples and Dahlias

ONE of the bugbears in the production of onions has long been loss in storage through sprouting. Some of the most desirable varieties are unfortunately poor keepers, which necessarily limits their use. Vegetable researchers have recently been experimenting with a new chemical called maleic hydrayide. These investigations show that when this chemical is sprayed on the leaves at rates of from 1,000 to 2,500 parts of the chemical per million of water about two weeks before harvest, the onions refuse to sprout in storage, even at room temperatures. There appears to be no injury to the onions from a single treatment and internal strucure, color, flavor and odor appears to remain normal.

The implications of the successful adaptation to commercial and home use of this method are considerable since a popular variety like Sweet Spanish which is so desirable for its yield and sweet, mild flavor, but is not a good keeper, could be grown as a storage onion. Also, ordinary warehouse or basement temperatures should be satisfactory for keeping the bulbs instead of the cold storage conditions usually required.

SOME COMPLAINTS

During the late fall season there are always complaints from apple growers as to the brown corky spots appearing in the flesh of the fruit. Varieties such as King, Spy and Jonathan frequently have more of this trouble than others. Sometimes affected fruits may be detected on the tree by the blushed or red portion of the apple being darker in color than is normal. Sometimes there are no external symptons of the trouble but when the fruit is cut it will shown light-brown spots of dead tissue either in the region of the core or scattered throughout the flesh. Corkiness in apples can frequently be corrected by simply applying borax broacast to the trees. Mature trees should receive about eight ounces. This small quantity may be mixed with dry sand or soil to aid spreading. Where there is a tendency for apples to crack this condition will be checked too by borax. Application should be made in early March so that subsequent rains will wash it well into the soil where the tree can reach it.

STORING ROOTS

Many materials have been found successful in which to store dahlia roots. Northwest Gardens and Homes Magazine reports several including dry peat moss, vermiculite, dry sand, dry planer shavings or sawdust. The point is stressed that sawdust should be from dry, not green wood. Dry cedar sawdust is said to be ideal. If you have difficulty storing your dahlia tubers perhaps one of these storage mediums may prove useful. Ordinarily dahlia tubers grown at the Station keep satisfactorily without burying in any storage medium. The clumps are simply left in boxes on the basement floor in a cool, dark corner. A temperature of 40-50 deg. F., seems satisfactory.

New Early Tomato Variety

Early and heavy-volume arrivals on the market of medium-sized and globe-shaped tomatoes that are almost free from cracks and other external blemishes may be expected next year, as a result of the development of the Carleton tomato by the Division of Horticulture, Federal Department of Agriculture. The new plant is a staking variety with many distinct advantages, such as extreme earliness, heavy early yield, good quality, uniformity in size, and freedom from cracks.

The Carleton is a selection from a cross between the Abel tomato, an early variety developed 20 years ago by the Division of Horticulture, and the Marglobe, a U.S.A. variety.

The Carleton is recommended for home and market-garden-growing purposes. Since it bears a medium-sized fruit, it will not find acceptance in the canning industry. Seed of this tomato was produced under contract last summer and will be available to the public next year through regular trade channels.

In the area along the north shore of Lake Ontario, the Carleton variety is already being grown on a commercial scale. Last summer it beat other early varieties by two to three pickings. In this same area it can be brought into bearing immediately after the green-house tomato season and will maintain production until the late tomato varieties appear on the market. An extra early picking may be obtained if a portion of the crop is staked.

Grades Give Best Turkey

The festive bird may be roast turkey, goose, duck or chicken; each is very fine eating. In most large Canadian cities, all poultry is sold by grade. The wise butcher knows that the descriminating customer likes to buy by grade so he is anxious to handle graded poultry. The grade mark is easy to see because it is always shown on the breast or wing of the bird. Certain colors designate certain grades. For instance, grade special is the top grade for poultry and it is always tagged with a purple tag. Grade A, the next grade, is tagged in red, grade B in blue and grade C in yellow. A top grade bird is one which has a good proportion of meat to bone, is well shaped and has been fattened for tenderness and flavor. A grade C bird may have less meat or may have pin feathers or discoloration.

Poultry may be purchased dressed or in a new convenient form, ready-to-cook, either fresh or frozen.

Auditoriums and Talent Scouts

TODAY and tomorrow will probably serve to demonstrate to a large number of people the great urgency of finding adequate civic accommodation for the city's own orchestra and its largest choral group who will be combining forces in the Royal Theatre for the annual Messiah performance. Indeed we are very lucky to have so comfortable a place to enjoy orchestral music, or any kind of choral and orchestral work, but the audience's comfort is one thing and the problem of arranging the orchestra and chorus on the stage is another. There is only one drawback about this wonderful country which can cause a pang of homesickness in the heart of a musician from Britain or any other part of Europe, and that is the woeful lack of adequate concert halls, even in the largest cities.

The problem of placing the chorus, orchestra and soloists on the stage of the Royal Theatre is admittedly not without difficulty, but this problem of placement pales into insignificance when the greater problem of projecting the sound made by the performers into the auditorium is faced. As I hinted a week ago the Choral Society now musters approximately 150 singers, and you have my word for it that in rehearsal they give out a magnificent body of tone; yet while they put forward every effort I know that when I meet them at the final rehearsal this afternoon I am going to be obliged to ask them to give even more. The reason is, of course, that a theatrical stage is to all intents and purposes an open-air affair, for there are wide spaces all around and above the proscenium which swallow up the sound like a sponge holds water. This also accounts for many of those apparent errors in balance between chorus and orchestra which have been noted at each of the two previous choral concerts.

In a proper concert hall these problems do not arise, for the stage is usually stepped up in tiers and the orchestra and chorus are under the same roof as the audience. Further, there is generally a fine organ situated at the back of the stage and the singers thus have support from both front and rear. However, there is no particular reason for allowing these deficiences to assume larger proportions than they already have, and indeed you may find that in the final results they have all been overcome.

The motive which impels me to mention them here is that I am concerned, not so much with Victoria's musical problems as they are now, but as they may be found to be in 10 years' time. I should not like to think that in 1961 musical affairs will have to be conducted in the hand-to-mouth manner which characterizes them at present. By then we may well have an orchestra of 100 players and a chorus of 250 or 300 singers. Already the orchestra counts upon 1,000 season ticket holders and next season, in view of the remarkable satisfaction which these patrons have obtained this year there may be a completely subscribed house for each concert. I think we shall have to plan for an audience of approximately 2,000 persons, in view of the inevitable expansion of the city's population.

* * *

It was suggested recently in the correspondence columns of this paper that most of the local societies, operatic, dramatic, symphony and choral, would spend most of their time squabbling over their respective rights in any community art centre which might be devised to meet their requirements, but surely this is taking a very illiberal view. All problems exist to be overcome, and it may well be found that many of their interests are incompatible. However, there is surely already enough common ground to justify some attempt at planning for the future. The writer was present at a meeting last spring which had these same difficulties under discussion, but it would seem that the spirits of those who called the meeting were daunted by obstacles even greater than those mentioned in this article. Mariners chart such obstructions and steer clear of them; is that not the only way to deal with our own local difficulties?

And now I have a word to say about talent contests. I am probably not in full possession of the facts but it seems to me that an idea exists in the mind of the general public—I am sure it can hardly exist amongst the readers of this column—that talent can be found amongst totally untrained persons, and that "talent scouts" can discover lurking in unsuspected places budding genius which has only to be nourished with a monetary reward for it to blossom forth abundantly. Nothing could be further from the truth.

* * *

I am sure that if you were to ask any of the soloists who were heard with the symphony last week, the newly arrived horn player, Mr. Steizner, or the trio who took part in the Beethoven Triple Concerto, Mrs. Hammond and Messrs Evens and Palmer, or any of my four vocal soloists for Messiah tomorrow, you would find that their present skills in music are built upon years and years of ceaseless application to study, and that they have had to make the very greatest sacrifices to achieve the present results. You don't put a violin in a boy's hand and make a violinist out of him. Even less do you find that a youth, or even an adult, who can copy some artist's version of a good or a bad song as he or she has heard it on a record, and make a fair show of reproducing a similar effect before a most indiscriminating body of listeners, is going to turn out a rival to Caruso or Chaliapin.

Musical talent is often only too evident in the young. One of my children has a phenomenal memory for nursery songs and the principle themes of symphonies, and can wave his hands about to the sound of music in a very convincing manner. He may indeed have a talent, but he will not be exempt from all the drudgery and disappointments which befall every student musician when once he begins to study, and should he ever in Providence's own good time achieve any success in this profession it will have been paid for over and over again in honest industry and years of patient waiting. Let no talent scouts come near him, for there are enough impresters in the world of art and of business without producing any more.

All this talent spotting business stems from the get-rich-quick mentality, and is fostered by the desire on both sides for advertisement and cheap publicity. It is sustained by the gullibility of the public who never take to heart the great lessons of the past, that hard work is the only passport to success and understanding, in music as in every other sphere of life.

A Queen's Christmas Tree

The introduction of the Christmas tree to England from Germany was largely due to the Prince Consort, who initiated the custom at Windsor in 1841. Now most British homes have their Christmas trees, gaily decorated and hung with presents. The above picture of Queen Victoria's tree is from an old print supplied by the United Kingdom Information Service.

HARBOR LIGHTS

By RAY WORMALD

Mention the nickname "Fergy" about Victoria's waterfront circle and the chances are your listener will think of E. G. Ferguson, now in his fifth year as second engineer aboard the hydrographic survey ship William J. Stewart.

Although only 45, husky and cheerful "Fergy" can actually be called an "old-timer" in British Columbia coastal shipping. He went to sea shortly after his 18th birthday.

The engineer is a native son; born in Saanich, and a student of the Tolmie and Tillicum Schools. From the classrooms he went to

E. G. FERGUSON

Victoria Machinery Depot for a four-year machinist apprenticeship. After a few shore jobs he commenced his seagoing career in a small tug named Redfern which operated about lower Vancouver Island. He was aboard that vessel when she struck a reef on the West Coast one cold morning and became a total loss.

The crew of six escaped without injury.

Then "Fergy" went to Vancouver to become associated with the C.P.R. He served aboard the Princess Adelaide, running between Victoria and Vancouver, for a short while, and then switched to the company's former coastal freighter Ss. Nootka. (She was recently sold to interests in Peru.)

* *

Around 1934 he was aboard the first Princess Marguerite (lost in enemy action in the war) and spent approximately nine years with that steamer on the popular "triangle run." Other C.P.R. ships in which he served included the Princess Louise on the Alaska run and the Princess Charlotte. Late in 1934 he left the sea to become a "landlubber" for awhile, and for sometime worked with the Victoria School Board and held other shore posts.

Outbreak of war in 1939 saw "Fergy" don the navy blue, and for four-and-a-half years he served in the Canadian minesweeper Ungava.

The ship was built at Vancouver and shortly after her commissioning she went to the east coast. The engineer was aboard, and saw extensive service on the Atlantic. He was still with the navy when he was transferred to the William J. Stewart toward the latter part of the war.

His discharge from the navy came in mid-1945 and he remained with the hydrographic survey vessel.

"Fergy" married the former Phyllis Parkinson of Proctor, B.C., and their home is at 942 Cloverdale. They have two sons, Ron, 19; and Eric, 12.

He is a member of the Elks' lodge, and lists gardening as "sort of a hobby."

Death Aboard The Veronica

Mutiny on Canadian Ship Led to Brutal Slayings on the High Seas. Leaders Later Hanged for Their Part in the 1902 Massacre

by T. K. WILLIS

THE last recorded mutiny aboard a square rigged barque flying the British flag occurred on Christmas Day, 1902, and it involved a Canadian ship.

Wm. Thompson and Co., of St. John operated a large fleet in the timber trade. In this fleet was the barque "Veronica" of 1093 tons and built by John Rowan of Indiantown, N.B. The ship is undistinguished throughout it's life but even in its dying days served as the stage for the most brutal acts man ever committed.

The number of men killed was not great and the fomenting of trouble was so carefully planned that even the skipper, Alexander Shaw, was not aware of it until he was struck down.

A MIXED CREW

The crew were of mixed nationalities, an Irishman, Paddy Moran, prime mover until his end; Gustave Rau, German and a giant; Moses Thomas, mulatto and fearful of his life every moment; two Germans, a Dutchman, two Hindoos, a Swede and two Canadians.

Paddy Doran was from Prince Edward Island and a fighter. He was smart on navigation and liked by the officers. Gustave Rau, on the other hand was the "size of two Dorans. He challenged again and again to be fo'castle boss and was beaten every time by the Irishman. He was stupid and revengeful and grew to respect Paddy's fists. So the seed of mutiny grew.

The Veronica was out of Biloxi, Gulf of Mexico, and headed for Montevideo when Rau told the men in the fo'castel that Paddy Doran was making trouble for them with the captain. Sides were taken, the Germans, the Dutchman siding with Rau, the others misbelieving the story altogether. The mulatto cook, too frightened to take sides was subsequently only allowed to live because the mutineers were too lazy to do their own cooking.

PADDY'S FATE

Paddy met his death in the doldrums off the Brazilian coast. It was a dark night and Paddy was lookout on the fo'castle head. The Germans, in a body and armed with iron belaying pins approached their victim. He saw them and was immediately on guard.

The men acted in all friendliness passing the time and finally asking him if he could see the north star. Paddy stooped to see under the foot of the foresail and as he did he was struck down with a pin. Somehow Paddy survived and turned to face his attackers. He fought but was finally beaten unconscious and pitched from the fo'castle head, and then thrown into the paint locker.

The captain, being deaf heard nothing, but young McLeod, the first mate, came forward to investigate. The Germans welcomed him in a friendly manner until he was within striking distance and then laid to with their weapons.

BRUTAL ACT

This act could not be hidden, the mutiny was in the open now and it was decided to throw McLeod overboard, dead or alive. Savagely, they put a chin hook in the man's eye, and tossed him over the side. Savage brutality took the helm on the Veronica and held it to the very end.

The frightened helmsman left his post. Captain Shaw, noticing the queerly acting ship, came on deck. He wept to the helm, bent over the binnacle, and Rau, laying in wait struck the old man. He staggered back to his cabin and Rau fired several shots at him from McLeod's pistol. Shaw was in great pain as the second mate came along and managed to get the captain inside but received a shot in the stomach. They barred the door and became prisoners on their own ship, wounded and without food or water.

The mutineers then returned to the paint locker. Paddy had regained consciousness and was calling for a drink of water. Rau dragged him to his feet, promising him the biggest drink in the world. Rau hauled him to the rail and pushed him into the sea. He was avenged at last, but when he took stock of the cost he felt more fear than triumph.

MORE KILLING

In the chart room the second mate and captain bound their wounds as best they could. The captain was shot in the chest and neck. The second mate was wounded in the stomach. They lay in this condition for three days. The mutineers had decided to cover up their crime and the plan involved getting rid of all hands who might not be relied upon.

They armed themselves with clubs and told the two men they could come out on deck for water. The second mate came first. He saw the armed men awaiting him and in his pitiful condition tried to make his way to the starboard side of the poop. The man came after him so he jumped overboard and started to swim. Rau ordered the ship about and shot at McLeod until he disappeared under the water. The end of the captain was no less savage.

A Hindoo was sent into the chart room with an axe and orders to chase the skipper out. Rau walked up to him and placed several shots into his head at close range. The body fell down the companionway and later was thrown into the sea.

THE LAST ACT

Rau knew now that there was no escape from justice unless he could concoct a likely story of disaster and abandonment at sea. The men would have to rehearse the story letter perfect and those who seemed likely to weaken under questioning would have to die. Rau marked them. Bravo, one of the Hindoos, was ordered onto the bowsprit to stow the flying jib and was shot.

Johannsen, the Swede, was ordered to haul up the slack of the foresheet, which had fallen into the water and while he was bent over to his task, Schmidt and Flohr shot him in the back of the head. Moses Thomas was also scheduled to go, as he had seen everything, and was no friend. An argument ensued as to who would do the menial task of cooking and to this Moses owed his life. There was a third man, Julius Parsons, a big fellow who had refused to have any hand whatever in the mutiny. He was thus a potential enemy and was locked up in a deckhouse. His was the worst death of all. He tried to escape through a window of his prison and because of his size became securely wedged, half in and half out.

VESSEL BURNED

On Christmas Day of 1902 the mutineers soaked the Veronica in kerosine, cast a great deal of gear overboard to make it look like a case of hasty abandonment, launched a well provisioned boat and set the match. They pulled away toward the Brazilian shore paying no heed to the screaming Julius Parsons jammed in the window of a deckhouse.

They landed ashore at a spot near Cazniera Island, a Brazilian mangrove swamp and a calling place for a Liverpool line picking up cotton and other products freighted down the river to this point. The ship was due on the 26th and the mutineers hid ashore as it approached and dropped anchor. Rau made up his mind to board her, tell "his" story and get passage to Europe.

The captain of the ship, "Brunswick" was suspicious but decided to take them aboard and treat them as shipwrecked men.

A CONFESSION

The Brunswick was ten days out and approaching Las Palmas on the Canaries when Moses Thomas broke down. He begged admission to the captain's cabin, told the entire story of the mutiny and asked protection as his life was in danger. The night before Rau had tried to kill him.

The captain took all details, swore Moses to truthfulness on the Bible and let the man out by another door. It was a ticklish situation. There were Germans in his crew, and there were those aboard who would not want to take the mulatto's word as truth. He decided not to put the men in irons but to carry on as though nothing out of the ordinary had occurred. Proof of Rau's intentions regarding Moses Thomas was witnessed by the captain himself one day as Rau threatened the mulatto with a razor.

At Madeira the loss of the Veronica by fire was reported, and at Lisbon the story of the mutiny was related to the British consul. His advice was to say nothing and carry the men to Liverpool. All aboard seemed quite pleased at the prospect of an early landfall.

JUSTICE PREVAILS

The Liverpool police were awaiting the Brunswick when she was warped into the Herculaneum Dock Wall. Aboard they snapped handcuffs on the Veronica survivors and hustled them off to the Dale Street Jail.

In court Moses Thomas told his story almost word for word, but the other four men stuck to their story of shipwreck and abandonment. Then Flohr, the murderer of Johannsen, after a few hours of solitary confinement turned King's evidence and supported Moses Thomas' story. This case was tried in St. George's Hall, May 12 to 15, 1903. The jury were out but 12 minutes, and the sentence was death. Mercy was recommended for the lad Monsson, eighteen years of age. Flohr, as King's evidence, went free. The others were hung in Walton Jail.

Notes From a Naval Scrapbook

By CAPTAIN H. KINGSLEY R.C.N. (Retired)

INSTALLMENT III

MOST of the young men went home in a few days, but as I was going all the way to Vancouver, I wanted to be sure that any others going as far were able to travel.

A terrible blizzard came up that next evening, but I was able to send off a batch of telegrams to parents, including my own, before the lines were choked. They had my wire before the news of the explosion appeared in the press. There was no radio then, and it saved them a lot of worry.

The hospitals were swamped and many in need of attention failed to get in. The north common was a mass of temporary shelters. How those people endured the blizzard, I can't think, but gradually they were placed elsewhere, and in a few days a Red Cross relief train arrived from Boston and helped immensely.

We found Teddy in Camp Hill Hospital, lying on a mattress on the floor, and the only way he could be recognized was his red hair sticking out of the top of a mass of bandages. It took an hour to change his dressings and the overworked staff just didn't have the time. The lieutenant-governor (whose son had been one of our seniors) took a keen interest in our fortunes and was kindness itself whenever I called. As soon as he heard of Teddy, he placed his car and driver at my disposal to get him out and bring him to Government House. His daughters personally did the nursing. They managed to save one eye.

THE RECOVERY

Bill was in a hospital I didn't know existed and it too was overcrowded. He was lucky enough to be in a bed. A man in the next cot had been in the engine room of a tug, and had been thrown into the engines, losing a leg. In Bill's case, recovery was slow for a piece of steel had taken out a sizeable chunk of flesh and haemorrhages kept occurring until a Boston specialist operated. He received better attention after some friends of ours took him into their home on Queen Street.

I found Commander Nixon in Dr. Curry's house and made daily reports to him when he was well enough. His head injuries were severe and recovery slow. It was fortunate that there was only one casualty (death) in the college and that was a cleaning woman in the north dormitory.

Remembering that I was the editor of the college magazine, I now proceeded to get it out, collecting what I could and visiting advertisers and the press. It duly appeared with a short epilogue on the explosion which Professor MacMechan kindly "vetted" for me.

LEAVING HALIFAX

I finally left Halifax alone, six weeks later, and arrived in time to see my father before he died.

The college was re-established for six months at Kingston Military College, taking over B block. This was an unsatisfactory arrangement, but by September we were shifted to Esquimalt, and until we were able to live in a building being prepared for us in the dockyard, we were accomodated aboard H.M.C.S. Rainbow in the harbot and the survey vessel Algerine.

Here we first learned to sling hammocks, and our first touch of nautical life was great fun. We learned practical things and saw at first hand what had been explained from books in a classroom, but the instruction was no doubt difficult in the extreme and we were put ashore to finish our time.

COLLEGE EDUCATION

The best form of training establishment for both college and men of the naval service, is, in my own humble opinion, a college or barracks with classrooms adjacent to a wharf where lies a training ship, capable of taking them out to sea, from the very start of their careers.

The navy will always need sailors first, and specializing or university courses should come later. I fail to find anything to recommend it, in the present system of combined services colleges. It is a college education in a military atmosphere. Morale must only be that of any Canadian university and service traditions cannot take root under these circumstances. The naval training is left to summer leave periods so that the system is little better than the University Naval Training scheme.

THE MIDSHIPMAN

On passing our examinations (there was one failure), we were rated midshipmen and sent over to train with the Royal Navy. Lieutenant C. T. Beard (late Commander Beard, M.L.A., British Columbia) had the task of seeing our term safely as far as Whale Island, the Royal Navy's premier gunnery school, and we probably caused him a lot of worry.

Arrived in the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool, we had to wait overnight for our train to London and we were cautioned about females! One hopeful was seen talking to such a person and on being called over, said it was his cousin. He was sent to his room, but only a few minutes later another young man was seen talking to the same person. Not knowing of his predecessor's lapse, he also said it was his cousin, which must have seemed to lack in imagination somewhat to Lieutenant Beard, for the second aspirant shortly followed the first.

The author at Batoum on the Black Sea before the red occupation in 1920.

GOOD TRAINING

We had now entered a period of practical training and further intensive courses, which would continue for some four or five years until as lieutenants, with certificates to certify our capability of taking charge of a watch in a ship at sea, we would return to Canada to find our navy at its lowest ebb, its future problematical, and disarmament the popular misconception of the time. It is not surprising that only four remained from the original 14 "little nigger boys" by 1923. "If you wish for peace, prepare for war" is a well tried maxim with which many would agree in this day.

BEATTY SQUADRON

But to return to the spring of 1919, the armistice was on, but peace had not been concluded when we joined our first ship at Rosyth in the Firth of Forth.

Beatty's famous battle cruiser squadron, with his old flagship, H.M.S. Lion was lying below the bridge and a large part of the grand fleet were swinging to their moorings above it on a bright June morning when we climbed the ladders of our respective battleships. They divided us into groups of four, which made it a bit tougher, for of course, we were again the most junior of all the occupants of the gunrooms (the subordinate officers' messes) of the fleet; and the butt of anyone a day senior in seatime.

We took a certain amount of this, but eventually worked out a scheme of sticking together and ganging up on any particularly offensive customer when rules allowed horseplay. This had an instant effect as none of us were undersized and we were left alone pretty well after that.

PRACTICAL WORK

Most of a midshipman's work is practical, but courses in every subject are held and an instructor lieutenant provided. An officer, usually the navigator, is detailed as "Snotties' nurse," and he arranges the routine, but the senior midshipman arranges the watches, and both the "nurse" and commander (or executive officer) sign the most important leave book. By this system we went through all the positions from the bridge to the engine room, actually having to perform the duties of stoking in the boiler rooms and obtaining watchkeeping certificates in the engine room as well as being able to control the main armament of our ship.

Somehow, this puts me in mind of the old captain and chief engineer of a certain merchant vessel, who, after several heated arguments as to which had the easier job, decided that the only way to settle it, was for them to change places for a short while. Before the time limit had elapsed, the captain, down in the engine room, felt he'd had enough; steam was blowing from every joint, but the propellers wouldn't turn, so he gave up, and calling up the chief on the bridge, said, "All right, Chief. I guess you win; I can't get the damned engines to turn." To which a mournful voice replied from above, "Perhaps you had better come up here, Skipper; we're stuck in the mud!"

SERVICE SHIPS

To return to my story: My first ship was the battleship Erin, and three others of my term, Roy, Hilliard and Pentelow, accompanied me. This ship had been building for Turkey and was taken over by the British Admiralty. She had 10 13.5-inch guns for her main armament and 14 6-inch for her secondary. (This secondary armament is mainly for beating off destroyer attacks.) She had insufficient vertical bulkheads for damage control and inside deck armour was not at all satisfactory by later standards.

H.M.S. Canada, which was building for Chile, was similarly taken over by the Admiralty, as was H.M.S. Agincourt. The latter mounted 14 12-inch guns and was, I believe, also intended for Turkey. Neither she nor the Erin were ever delivered of course, but H.M.S. Canada was turned over to Chile and is still going strong under the name of Almirante Latorre.

H.M.S. Royal Sovereign.

LIFE AT SEA

We four Canadian midshipmen were transferred to H.M.S. Royal Sovereign when our first ship was paid off at Rosyth. The famous old ship on the spring cruise of 1920, which took us to the Mediterranean. There were nine battleships, two battle cruisers, the second destroyer flotilla and the old aircraft carrier Argus in company, and the whole time at sea seemed to be spent in one exercise after another until well after dark every day. The sight of so many ships together was a magnificent one, but we had little leisure to enjoy it.

To leave the cold shores of England in mid-January and cross the stormy Bay of Biscay was a real pleasure, for we could look forward to summer climes and strange places in the not far distant future. In northern waters, where the sky is heavily overcast most of the time, the seas appears almost black and forbidding, but, in the warmer parts of the world, the sky is usually a clear blue with a few friendly cumulus clouds, that look like cotton wool, and the sea changes to a distinct shade of blue.

Where this change is brought about by a warm current you invariably have fog, as in going from Halifax to Bermuda, but in our cruise southward along the coast of Spain, the change was more gradual, and although the air was warmer and the skies clearing, it was not until we were off Cape St. Vincent that I noticed the sea was no longer dark, but a lighter blue, green shade. To realize you are in the sub tropics for the first time and to look forward to seeing your first palm tree and Arab is a thrill I can recommend to any follower of the sea, no matter what his age.

We put into a dreary spot in Northern Spain called Arosa Bay and then Gibraltar. The famous cave which is supposed to go to Africa is entered from half way up the rock, and when I visited it last in 1936, you were not allowed beyond a certain point without guides. Two army officers tried to find a way through and never came back.

BOOKS

... T. GA.

What with "Dominion" becoming practically a dirty word in official Ottawa and the recent Massey report on Canadian culture a few foreign observers are beginning to cast an eye our way to see what's going on up north.

One of them is J. Donald Adams whose literate "Speaking of Books" column appears each week in the New York Times Book Review.

"Canadians are feeling their oats," he tells his readers.

"The country's material growth and increasing self-confidence are apparent to any traveler."

And he points out that Canada's growing-up is also being reflected in its cultural pursuits. Artists and writers he said are concerned over the creation of a truly national culture.

"That concern, it must be noted, is at the present stage, somewhat self-conscious. So, not too long ago, was our own," the New York writer comments.

He points out that the emergence of a native spirit has first become apparent in the work of Canadian painters.

Adams warns that "the improvement in Canadian literature for which (Canadian critics) are hoping can be endangered by trying too hard."

He points out that there is a tinge of the self-consciousness in trying at the same time to produce something Canadian yet at the same time universal which could prove hampering to the free self-expression at which Canadian writers are aiming.

ALICE TISDALE HOBART

New Novel Praises, Pans Medical Profession In U.S.

"The Serpent Wreathed Staff," by Alice Tisdale Hobart. (McClelland & Stewart, $4.00).

Mrs. Hobart, here, has written a controversial novel about the medical profession that is highly critical, and yet laudatory. She dissects the minds of her doctors to bring a complete picture of the advantages and drawbacks of the average doctor's mentality.

Hero of the novel, Dr. Alan Towne, is a visionary who believes in treating the well, in addition to the sick—in short, preventative medicine for the entire family through doctor co-operatives and private medical insurance.

The novel pivots on his efforts to set up first a doctor co-operative, and then his own hospital. The general opposition that comes to him throughout the years is capped by the near-hysteria of the profession when the possibility of socialized medicine appears in the United States.

Basis of the novel is the collision of change with the status quo, and the powerful forces always behind it. Mrs. Hobart says she could as well have chosen some other profession or business, but the end result belies it.

Drawn off against Alan is his older brother, Dr. Samuel Towne. These two are brilliant orthopedic surgeons, with Sam firmly established in business, while Alan is returning from war duty as a surgeon.

It is in their different approaches to medicine that Mrs. Hobart has found the hard core of her story. While Sam's interest is in the perfect operation, with the slightest possible personal contact with the patient, Alan wants to know what makes the patient tick, to have the close personal contact that will enable him to help his patient beyond the conclusion of a successful operation.

A ... person has dream of blocking disease before it starts, of lifting the crippling financial blows to families that follow in the wake of serious illness, and carrying out the post-sickness treatment that is often skipped because of lack of money.

The family side of the careers of the characters is sketched with the same brilliance that marks the professional aspects of the novel.

Mrs. Hobart puts in the mouth of old Dr. Towne, father of the two boys, some of her thoughts about medicine, when he says:

WARNING

"Every theory in medicine . . . must be beaten out on the anvil of skepticism. So do we weed out charlatanism . . . I warn you (however) not to make skepticism a habit. Ours is a profession of adventure. Only so do we go forward."

This is an exciting and challenging novel, perhaps the finest that Mrs. Hobart has turned out. This recommendation speaks for itself with a background of such novels as "River Supreme," "Oil for the Lamps of China," "Yang and Yin," "Their Own Country," "The Cup and the Sword," "The Peacock Sheds His Tail" and "The Cleft Rock."—F.C.B.

Century of English History Forms Backdrop for Story

"The House in Between," by Howard Spring (Collins, $3.50).

This is a monumental work and a worthy successor to "My Son! My Son!" and "Fame is the Spur."

Whether this fascinating novel will rank with Mr. Spring's previous best-sellers remains to be seen, but it should.

Taken from the old music hall song, containing the words: "You could see Crystal Palace if it wasn't for the houses in between," this latest masterpiece is the story of Sarah Undridge, who was three years old in 1852 when Crystal Palace was opened by Queen Victoria as a monument to peace. Sarah lived for 99 years.

In this tremendous life span England's past is recorded along with the complicated lives of about six families. Sarah Undridge began life as the daughter of Richard and Florence Rainborough.

The Rainboroughs had a governess for Sarah, a footman, a butler, a coachman and a maid, yet "rules and regulations" in the family stated the first fire was laid November 1 and the last on March 31. If October 30 was a freezing day, that would make no difference, there would be no fire. Such rules were necessary, said Papa, life couldn't run punctually without them. Thus Richard Rainborough was a successful man, but not wise or clever to hold the love of his wife.

For next door lived the divorced Lord Burnage and his gay and precocious daughter Sally Gaylord. When Sarah and her governess Margaret Whale returned from a trip to France, Florence Rainborough had become Lady Burnage.

From then on Sarah had Sally as a sister and the beautiful Burnage estate, of Tresant in Cornwall, came into focus to remain a vital influence the remainder of Sarah's life.

SLOW CHANGE

In the generations which followed, life in Cornwall intermingled with fashionable London. A fisherman's daughter came to be one of the most beautiful women in London. Sarah saw her relatives die in the Boer War, in Flanders and her own daughter's child was killed in the Second World War. Sarah and her aide shivered in their flat as the bombs rained down during the Blitz.

Without a doubt Mr. Spring has the faculty of keeping his readers' interest, no matter how many characters he has introduced. The reader is forced, despite the time element in absorbing 576 pages of printed matter, to find out just how these people with such fabulous lives make out.

Buy this book and you will be still gaping for days after you have read it, that one woman should have been able to have crowded so much into 99 years and still found time to write it all down.—J.R.A.

Anglo-Americans Watch Hitler's Sky-Rocket Rise

"This Was Tomorrow," by Elsyth Thane (Collins, $3.75).

World-conscious young people not old enough to remember the First World War and yet not old enough to serve in the second, watch the sky-rocket rise of Hitler with varying emotions in the interesting Miss Thane's latest novel.

The group is composed of members by birth or marriage of a far-flung but closely-knit Anglo-American family. The only outsider is a young Nazi attached to the German embassy in London who persuades a pretty, young daughter of the family, intent on promoting world peace, to leave for Berlin with him on the eve of war.

Although things happen in her book, for besides this incongruous elopement a few more love affairs begin and are scrupulously tidied up before the last page, Miss Thane is just as concerned with what her characters think as with what they do.

And because she sketches people well, "This Was Tomorrow" is a readable and entertaining book. Both her characters and readers manage to laugh as well and worry despite the apparent advent of battle.

This is the author's 25th published work. Others by Miss Thane include "From This Day Forward," "Riders of the Wind" and the play "... Die, Dragonfly!"—M.D.G.

New Oxford Bible Edition

"The Reader's Bible" (Oxford, $6.50).

An annual event is the report that the Bible is still topping the all-time best-seller lists. This latest contribution to the limitless editions, published in Canada by Oxford University Press in conjunction with Macmillan's and Collins, will give added impetus to the perennial sales.

FULL TEXT

Offered here is the complete text of the King James' version, containing the Old and New Testaments with Apocrypha, and all designed for easy and pleasant reading, something that many editions have not stressed.

Opening the volume are two interesting chapters. First is the epistle dedicatory written by the translators to King James; the second is the translators' report to the readers. Both make interesting reading.

The usual double columns of the Bible are dispensed with here, so that the eye is treated to the modern format for the first time in an unabridged one-volume edition, according to the publishers. Type faces used are easy to read, and the psalms and blank verse are set up in an appealing style.

The volume is virtually a must for the average person who likes to browse regularly through one of the great works of literature. A definite addition to the home library.

Nylon Tricot Now Luxury Lingerie

By ANNE YATES CLARKE

NYLON tricot has come of age. It has matured beautifully into the field of fine lingerie. Once considered "utilitarian," it is now made into the most exotic gowns, peignoirs and slips that ever found their way under a Christmas tree, pieces now treasured beside the fine French hand-mades that were formerely placed at the top of most feminine Christmas lists.

As nylon tricot was perfected—became more sheer and beautiful—as manufacturers learned to pleat it permanently and to handle it as successfully as if it were finest silk, styling kept pace with the mechanical improvements. One of the first designers to treat it with the same care and skill that had formerly gone into silks and satins was Nancy Melcher of Vanity Fair. Her wonderful pleated gowns and lace trimmed slips soon became famous—more to be desired by fastidious women than any other type of lingerie. Stores began asking for more and lovelier pieces, because their customers wanted them. Nylon tricot had arrived!

This year, in time for Christmas giving and for replenishing your own supplies, fine lingerie is ready in the stores. Imported laces (many of them made of nylon), embroidery, pleating, ribbons and all the other frippery that makes women love lingerie have been included. The separate pieces from panties to peignoirs and the sets are exquisite beyond belief, flattering and feminine. In addition they can be sudsed out quickly and then dried in a jiffy. All the practical attributes of the most "utilitarian" early nylons are still there, plus new glamor and luxury. Gowns and peignoirs are full and flaring they really look like evening gowns and wraps—and the slips are slender or full, as you prefer. There are darling bed jackets, peri panties and petticoats. Pleatings, pleated sections, fine laces often made of nylon are used to trim them, and the new colors are little short of divine. Though white is a great favorite, there are wonderful pastels and some deeper shades. Shopping for them is an adventure, and giving them is a thrill for both the one who gives and the one who receives.

Nylon tricot, sheer and beautiful, makes luxurious lingerie that is the Christmas gift supreme, and is just as desirable for your own wardrobe. Styled and trimmed as handsomely as silks and satins ever were, these pieces also have the practical features of nylon, easily laundered and quick-drying. Pleats stay in permanently. Upper left is a slip with nylon lace bodice and scalloped skirt. Upper right is a nightgown. The ruffle at the neckline has a shell-like look. The peignoir to wear over your nylon gowns is of gossamer nylon net with delicately lace-trimmed and embroidered yoke.

Evening Bag Holds Lot of Charm

By MARIAN RAHL

THE little handbag that goes to parties this winter is just as soft and lovely as the clothes it complements. You'll find many in the same fabulous fabrics as your dresses and yet their prices are very much down to earth.

Fashion's influence on the smaller purse for party wear reflects such things as the new rounded silhouette found in your skirts posed over crinoline. This is evident in the soft pouch shape gathered to its frame or a yoke effect just below the frame. Rich trimmings enhance the charms of others just as they do the bodice or neckline of your new dress: Rhinestones, sparkling gold dots and even silk braid give a rich and expensive look to the evening purse for holidays and the whole winter season.

Your handbag may be one of the newly smart envelope shapes; a box bag which looks more 1951-52 if it has rounded or curved lines; a pouch type or even the reticule with thin gold braid just like grandma's. Remember when choosing yours that it should be comfortable to hold and carry. If you like something you can shift to your wrist or arm, the purse with handles is the answer.

You may select a simple black or white bag if you want something basic to go with a variety of clothes and other accessories. Brocade or gold or silver have a way of working beautifully with most colors. If you feel your dress needs the sharp accent of a bright color consider red or turquoise in a little satin bag. Have satin slippers dyed to match for a gala touch.

FOR LATE DAY

Also important in the handbag picture for winter is the contrast of texture which you are more likely to find in bags for late day or afternoon wear. Here you'll find suede trimmed with calf or patent leather, satin and velvet combined. Amber shell appears in frame and button trimmings on suede, taffeta, faille or broadcloth. These too are in the longer, narrower shapes in box and soft pouch types.

Light Problem In Your Home

It takes a lot of light to make a home. First is the light of understanding followed by well directed daylight and adequate and suitable artificial light.

Rooms lighted by day from one exposure present a real problem because three areas are thrown into shadow if means are not found to supplement this natural light with artificial light.

Total use of light from windows is accomplished in several ways. The simplest method is to hang draperies over the walls and not over the window. The next method is to install glass block or architectural translucent glass in partitions so that light from the window in one room can be utilized in the adjoining room.

The walls near the window can be painted a color that absorbs light and the walls far from the window can be painted the colors that reflect light. Ceilings will be painted to reflect light but need not be white. They may be in a pastel in the wall color.

The floor can be covered wall to wall in a light reflecting, new short loop, made-to-measure cotton surface carpeting. This carpeting is woven on a heavy canvas to which is applied a heavy natural latex coating, causing the rug or carpet to lie flat and firm to the floor. The texture of the carpet picks up the light differently in different areas of the room, giving interest and design.

This Dress Doubles on Occasions

By MARIAN RAHL

The costume that doubles for different occasions is still tops in many wardrobes and one of the nicest ideas to come along is the loose housecoat that doubles as a dress for shopping when you snug in the waistline with its belt.

There's plenty of fashion in these coverall so that you never have the conspicuous feeling you would in a housedress if you have to make a hundred trips to the store, to pick up the child en at school or someone at the station. They have all the smart touches you find on winter's dresses—deep raglan sleeves that push up on the arm, Mandarin collars and youthful wide Peter Pan shapes as well. Jeweled buttons and even flowers are some of the gay trimmings.

The coat dress is in good fashion standing and so these at-home-and-abroad outfits which button to the hemline fit into the picture beautifully. They have single and double-breasted closings and various size buttons.

Fabrics are attractive and practical. You'll find washable pinwale corduroy in such colors as navy, melon, copper and turquoise. Your choice is not limited to solid colors either as interesting plaids also are available.

When you've worn one of these during the day and plan to stay at home that evening all you have to do is remove the belt and you have the same relaxed feeling of removing that girdle!

The Man of the Week

By G. E. MORTIMORE

Charles E. Rivett-Carnac: Guardian of Law and Order

THE chauffeur driven Rolls-Royce glided to a halt at the dockside, and a tall, heavily-built young man stepped out.

"First class, sir?" asked the porters, rushing to snatch his suitcase.

"No," he said. "Steerage, thank you."

That was how Charles Edward Rivett-Carnac at the age of 23 began the most important voyage in his life. Now, at 49, he is the boss of Royal Canadian Mounted Police in British Columbia.

Assistant Commissioner Rivett-Carnac may be dismayed to learn how this anecdote of his passage to Canada has been marked and repeated. He is not given to boasting. And yet the happening is a compact symbol of his life and character.

HE WAS BROKE

He did not travel steerage as a pose, but because he was broke. On the other hand, he had no obvious need to travel at all. He wanted to join the "Mounties" because it was the toughest job he could think of at the time. And the assistant commissioner will admit, if you question his motives, that he has always chosen the rough way over the smooth.

"Adventure" is the way he and others of his stamp will sum up the challenge that calls them to the far and difficult places. The word seems in one sense hackneyed and not entirely adequate; but if you grasp the feeling with which it is charged, it tells you all you need to know.

Here is an Englishman of obvious birth and breeding, and a man among men. The image of the Rolls-Royce will do to describe him. The smooth, comfortable manner is a complement to, not a contradiction of, the concealed power which can be drawn upon when it is needed.

FROM SUSSEX

Charles Edward Rivett-Carnac was born in Eastbourne, Sussex, the son of a deputy inspector general of police in India. All his family for generations had been in the services or the church. And for generations, too, the Rivett-Carnacs had been associated with India. One of them had been a governor of Bombay in the time of the East India Company.

The young Rivett-Carnac was separated early from his parents. They remained in India for long periods while he was left in England in the care of his uncle, a retired Indian army colonel, and sent to St. Cyprian's Preparatory School and Eastbourne College.

When he was just over 16 he joined an ambulance unit attached to the French army in the 1914-18 war. For about 18 months he helped carry wounded soldiers from the front line.

OFF TO INDIA

Then he went to India for three and one-half years. At first he ran elephant camps on the Borelli River in the foothills of the Himalayas, gathering cottonwood timber which was rafted down river to sawmills on the Brahmaputra to be made into tea boxes.

It was a chancy life. He slept in a hut with a .45 automatic stuck through the wall. One never knew what would be coming in — a leopard bent on making a meal of the dog, or a disgruntled worker out to get the boss. He still bears the scars of a battle with savage men from across the border who accepted advance payments of food, refused to work, then set upon him when he insisted they keep their bargain.

At the age of 21 he was transferred to Biara in Central India, where he became the manager of a lime factory. Later he was transferred again to Calcutta. In that city was the headquarters of the firm for which he had been working all along — Bird and Company, one of those industrial giants of India which command all kinds of enterprise from jute to timber.

They made him private and social secretary to one of the partners. It was a solid job with a future. Ask him why he left, and he says this:

"I was never happy in the job. I saw myself sitting back for years, getting stereotyped, marrying and sending the children home to England to be educated . . . I was one of those peculiar individuals who wanted to see how things ticked in other parts of the world . . .

"If you could prosper under difficult conditions, you could say 'Now I amount to something.' I don't know whether that makes sense or whether it doesn't."

LEGION MATERIAL

He went to England as a step on his way to other parts. At the back of his mind was the idea that he might join the French Foreign Legion. The homebound ship stopped at Marseilles, and he called at the Legion recruiting depot. There he was told he would have to wait 24 hours before reporting back. But the ship was sailing the same day, and if he kept his appointment with the Legion he would miss seeing England again. So he traveled on.

Although the job in India had been well enough paid, he had lived up to his income, because a man was almost obliged to do so. He landed in England broke, and had to sell his automatic pistol to pay the fare from Tilbury to London.

He went to stay with some friends for a time, then took that ride in their car down to the boat bound for Canada.

When he landed he had $35 in his pocket. His chief aim was to join the R.C.M.P., but he was also prepared to go logging.

SHOVELS ROCKS

He took a job shovelling rocks into a cement mixer at 35 cents an hour for a 12-hour day at Montreal docks. That job came to a sudden end when someone dropped a plank on his head and he was moved to hospital. He applied to join the R.C.M.P. with his head still in a bandage. They swore him in, and he went to Ottawa for training.

He was sent to a lonely detachment on the Mackenzie River in the far north. For a man who wanted a rugged life, the posting was all that could be desired. There were long patrols on snowshoes with a dog team through temperatures ranging down to 60 below zero. Detachments of two men every 150 or 200 miles policed the country, carried the mail, visited lonely trappers to see that they were safe, tended the sick and gave help wherever it was needed.

There were no radios or airplanes. The nearest doctor was 700 miles away by dog-team. One dog-team mail arrived every winter, and two boats every summer.

THEN TO B.C.

He spent three and one-half years in Mackenzie River country, then came to B.C. for a year in 1927. In the following year he went to Regina as division orderly, with the rank of corporal, then to the Yukon for three years.

Life in the north was tough, but so were the men there. They prided themselves on it. "In the 1920's in the far north the only respect anybody had for you was based on how far you could travel—how tough you were." Dead tired or not, travelers pressed on. The policeman covered a minimum of 35 miles a day on snowshoes. He remembers once going 169 miles in three days.

WITHOUT TENT

Another time he had to sleep for several days without a tent in 60-below weather. He would dig a hole in the snow and lie down on top of spruce boughs in a sleeping bag.

The traveler had to plod along the river on an ice overflow leaning at a 45-degree angle, holding steady on a dog-line so that the dogs and their 500-pound load wouldn't roll away.

"The northland people were probably the finest I've come across anywhere," he says. "For tenacity and general decency, I've never found anyone to beat 'em."

In general "there was no crime except murder." Sometimes a trapper would go berserk and shoot his neighbor or partner, or mow a rival down for poaching. But scarcely anyone would resist arrest. They had too high a regard for policemen, who were their friends.

Mr. Rivett-Carnac was surprised to get a telegram appointing him inspector. He went back to Regina to be adjutant of the training depot. There, in 1932, he married Mary Dillon-Ware, daughter of Col. F. B. Ware, D.S.O., of London, Ontario, and took his bride to the Western Arctic.

They lived in a small frame building. Tasks included lighting fires in the single coal and wood stove and chopping ice from the water barrel. Their first child, Beverley Ann, was born at Aklavik, one of the few white babies to see the light in the far north. An early diet of frozen fish, corn flakes, canned milk did not prevent her growing up to be a healthy young lady. She is now 18 and will soon start training as a nurse at Royal Jubilee Hospital. There is a second daughter, Mary Frances, 11.

AT THE CAPITAL

Mr. Rivett-Carnac went from the Western Arctic to headquarters, Ottawa, where he was placed in charge of intelligence. He went subsequently to Saskatchewan, was made superintendent, and moved back to Ottawa in 1944, to take charge of intelligence for Canada.

In 1947 he was promoted assistant commissioner and took over command of Saskatchewan. He remained there until March of this year, when he came here to take command of "E" division (B.C.) the largest division in the force, succeeding Assistant Commissioner Alan T. Belcher, the officer who organized the force in B.C. after the amalgamation with the provincial police.

Assistant Commissioner Rivett-Carnac is known among his subordinates (though not in his presence) as "Rivets." They look upon him with affection and a lively respect. Subordinates say he is a stern disciplinarian, but quick to help a man in trouble. He is a keen judge of character, and can make lightning decisions. When he is handed a document, he scans it in seconds and makes a comment that strikes to the heart of the matter.

He is about six feet one inch tall, 210 pounds. His voice is crisp and resonant. In manner he suggests a kindly version of screen star George Sanders minus the sneer. Hanging on one wall of his office is the motto that has guided his life:

"The game is more than the players of the game
And the ship is more than the crew."

Province Has Its Desert Area Where the Summer Temperature Soars Above the Hundred Mark and the Lowly Cactus Grows

By L. G. TEMPLE

EVER since Rudyard Kipling wrote "Our Lady of the Snows," Canada has been typed in the minds of those living elsewhere as a place of sub-arctic climate and vegetation. Even British Columbia, with it's mild coastal climate, is thought of in connection with snow and ice, rather than cactus and sagebrush. Yet there is a spot in B.C. that resembles Arizona more than some parts of that state does itself, and I am not referring to any mythical tropical valleys in the mountains, either.

NO CAR ROAD

Tourists don't visit it, for there is no car road into it. Even though the mighty Fraser runs through it, Bruce Hutchison doesn't mention it in his book about that river. While it is used for winter range by various ranches that divide it's ownership among them, coyotes were the only permanent residents I saw in the area. Plenty of sagebrush grows there, to say nothing of cactus. And when I was there in July and August, the thermometer hit 115 deg. in the shade. (We were afraid to put it in the sun, for fear it would blow up!)

SEMI-DESERT

Some forty miles up river from Lillooet is the Big Bar Ferry and post office; the same man is both ferryman and postmaster. This B.C. semi-desert starts here and extends north along the stream for about 25 miles, almost to the Gang Ranch Bridge. The Fraser runs in the bottom of a trench several hundred feet deep, which sometimes narrows to a rock-walled canyon. From the edge of this mighty ditch, bench lands run back to the foot of the hills and mountains wich rise a couple of thousand or more feet above them. These bench lands, frequently cut by steep, rocky ravines that carry the run-off snow from the higher levels during the spring thaw, form a reasonable facsimile of the landscapes familar to all movie patrons of western "epics."

DEEP CANYONS

A mile or two north of Big Bar a huge circular depression has been eroded from a projecting shoulder of Big Bar Mountain. Nearly a half a mile in diameter, it is a grotesque maze of deep, winding miniature canyons, pointed peaks, deep sink holes. Moreover, it is all done in technicolor; almost every shade from white to black decorates the Hole, as it is called locally, with prodigal liberality. In fact, it looks like an artist's dream of the Arizona badlands, or a science fiction writer's idea of a lunar landscape. From the rimrock that borders the upper edge to the bottom of the canyon that drains it is about a thousand vertical feet.

WEIRD SHAPES

A few miles beyond the Hole, Razor Ridge parallels the river for a half a mile. Rising steeply from the water on it's west side, it drops some 500 feet on the east side to the level of the rolling, desert-like flat that extends to the foot of the Big Bar Mountain. Except for a small, flat area big enough to pitch a small tent on, the top of the ridge is only about a foot wide. The steep sides are dotted with weird shaped pinnacles of rock.

From the summit of Razor Ridge, looking north along the valley, you gaze on what is known as the Organ Pipes. Picture a mountain over a thousand feet high which has been eroded to such an extent that the whole face appears to be a series of vertical columns, and capped with formations that look like gargayles and toadstools, and you will have a visual image of the Organ Pipes, or the Cathedral, as some call this piece of nature's sculpture. Even the few residents of the region are fascinated by this remarkable result of erosion by wind and water.

That is the picture you get when you first see it, from a distance. Then, if you approach right up to the foot of it, you discover that what appeared in the distance to be vertical grooves, are in reality the entrances to little canyons, ten or fifteen feet wide and a thousand feet deep, which run back into the mountain for hundreds of feet. On the occasional shelf part way up, a knarled, tired looking Ponderosa pine clings tenaciously to life. Piles of gravel, stones and clay slope from the bottom far out into the benchland between the mountain and the river.

CACTI GROW

Sparce bunch grass, interspersed with sagebrush, and frequent clumps of a variety of cactus that has very sharp spines and cowers close to the arid soil, cover the rolling benchlands. On a rocky spire close to the river an eagle perches, watching the water with telescopic vision form for any unwary salmon that gets too close to the surface. Winding through the stony gulches and steep claybanks, a littler of half-grown coyote pups search for anything they can eat.

If a careening stage coach, pulled by four horses at full gallop, suddenly appeared around a rocky outcrop, closely pursued by masked outlaws firing sixguns, one would take it as a natural occurence. The scenery looks more like a movie set than any movie set for wild west show I ever saw. This is British Columbia's own desert; I doubt if Hollywood ever filmed a better one. All it lacks is Gila monsters and horned toads and at that, I wouldn't bet there aren't! Anyway, those little cacti have a real bite; I know; I sat on one!

The organ pipes, a peculiar formation with heaps of rubble at the base.

This formation is known as The Hole.

CUFF LINKS

Richards and Roman Links

FASHION: Deadly combat in the Coliseum of ancient Rome, depicted in the screen version of "Quo Vadis," has inspired a new twist in men's accessories. Baritone Donald Richards wears cuff links showing a profile of a helmeted gladiator. A tie clasp in the same motif is shaped like a gladiator's sword.

Presidential Peculiarities: Theodore Roosevelt shaved every day at 12.40 p.m. The barber always came to the White House . . . While Jefferson was president, he greatly offended a British minister by receiving him while wearing house slippers . . . John Quincy Adams had his clothes, stolen while swimming in the Potomac River.

Handyman: If your youngster rides a bicycle to school—the seat can be kept rain-free by slipping an oil-silk bowl cover over it . . . A thumbtack stuck into the side of your pencil will keep it from rolling off desk of table . . . Lengths of rubber tubing slipped over pliers' handles will give a sure, comfortable grip.

Gimmicks: Miniature barber pole shave pack, personalized with man's first name. Holds shaving brush, safety razor and used blades . . . Pocket size "Jon-E" Hand-warmer for those who work or play outdoors in cold weather . . . A device for cracking ice without effort. The "Tap-Ice" spring steel vibrator does the trick.

Dress Tips: A soft bristle hat brush is better than a whisk broom or ordinary clothes brush for a good felt hat. Always brush with the nap . . . For cleaning sponge rubber sole shoes, use a small brush to apply soapsuds mixed with a little ammonia. Then wipe them off with a clean damp cloth.

Amateur Chef: To prevent tears when peeling onions—keep them under water while you're operating on them . . . Circular cakes will remain fresh much longer after cutting if slices of bread are pinned to both cut sides with toothpicks . . . You can remove the last elusive drops of fat from a pot of vegetable soup in a jiffy with a lettuce leaf.

Odd Items: According to Dr. Charles Shead, of the Mayo Clinic, one-quarter of your body energy is used in seeing . . . Pass the cigars to: Restaurateur Arnold Reuben, who to my knowledge, has never turned down a request involving servicemen or veterans. He still entertains dozens each week and sends great quantities of food to hospitals and canteens.
